DUKE UNIVERSITY
DURHAM, NORTH CAROLINA

DEDICATION TO AN IDEAL

WHERE ONCE THERE was brown and grey tweed, there now is khaki and navy blue. The steady hum of convertibles, jammed with noisy couples, used to keep company with the road stretching between East and West Campus—now only an occasional bus breaks the silence and emptiness. At one time the professors carried only notebooks to class, but now their brief cases bulge with official reports from Washington, D. C. There's a hurried rush to the dope shop as soon as word has spread that chocolate ice cream is being sold there. Bugles have more than taken the place of alarm clocks on West in announcing another grey dawn of a busy day. Longer union lines, posters and speeches, new cut systems and busier hours—all have been indications of a change from peace to war here at Duke in the past two years.

But still the same buildings overlook the same walks, the same trees—their concreteness has had no mark of the war-time Duke scratched on their surfaces. Still from the chapel comes the unforgettable singing of the choir. The carillon rings from the top of the grey stone tower. Our books are not on the verboten list. Our actions, our thoughts are our own, not governed by a supreme power. As individuals we function, with responsibilities to our country through ourselves— as free people, not as slaves led by blind and inflexible dogmas.

Let us hope that Duke is a sample of the rest of America. We know it is. We know that whether we be in Duke or Oklahoma, Maine or California, we can look up into a clear blue sky with a free spirit. We know too that we can whistle a tune and laugh when we feel like it. This is our right, Americans. We have a name for it—freedom. The word has come down to us from the tears and laughter and speeches of American people. It was this word that set the course of our seventeenth-century sail boats towards the West. It was this word that we felt in the wind as it blew across our faces there on the deserted Plymouth shore. Liberty! Patrick Henry knew the full force of its meaning, and a hundred voices caught it up, making the mountains and fields echo with the power of it. We molded it into a cast iron bell and hung it in Philadelphia; we sang it in our anthems; we watched it grow in our wheat fields and our forests. This freedom is all ours, Americans—every criticism, every idea. We are a part of it because we have breathed it every moment of our lives. Created by time and the windswept universe, this freedom has centered upon the individual with an intangible singing that echoes in thunder and vibrates as hammer hits steel.

Let us not forget that this freedom is created throughout the sunlit streets of America, in our children's play, through the sound of church bells, and in the right to stand up in an assembly and say the truth as we know it.—So let us remember all this, and hope that some-day people all over the world will also know the meaning of this word Freedom.

R E F A C E

Our generation is now taking part in a tremendous struggle—a struggle not only for land, natural resources and power, but for a philosophy of life.

We are fighting for the rights of the individual, for security, for freedom. We may not realize that these ideals are our goal—we fight for tangible realities; to get back to those morning rides in the country, to that coke at the drugstore, to Sunday morning breakfast at home. Yet if we stop to think, we realize that these things are freedom. Freedom is not an abstract quality—a thing only of poetry and song. It is an intimate part of our life. It is the church we attend, the books we read, the vote we cast. It is ours to hold and to defend.

Duke Campus retains that idealism, though grey flannels have given way to Navy blues, and cashmere sweaters to Marine greens. This 1944 CHANTICLEER has been divided into four sections that are representative of these ideals.

First, there is Comprehension, in which are included all civilian and military academic classes. By comprehension we mean not merely the learning of a particular subject by rote, but the ability to adapt oneself to whatever comes—to grasp, evaluate and judge.

Then, there is Achievement, containing honorary groups and those organized for service and social purposes. A man is regarded by the campus as having gained achievement when he is tapped into an honorary fraternity or when he is elected an officer of a group; however, we must remember that achievement is not merely social prestige or political favor, but the true worth of the man that has been developed.

Life and Laughter speaks for itself—dances, dates, sororities, fraternities—all make up the social life of the student. It is the glow of companionship and the carefree music of laughter that clears away daily cares and enhances the worth of living. In this section, the reader will find the greatest number of informal pictures of everyday campus life. Other informal shots are scattered throughout the book just as the events were scattered and mixed throughout in the school year.

Stamina—football, basketball, baseball, soccer—these are some of the activities included in this section. In all parts of the world fighting men realize the value of stamina, and we here are learning it and try to apply it.

We have tried to make this book a cross section of Duke at war—a book that students will some day pick up and say: "This was Duke as I knew it in 1944." We have tried to make it a book that will truly express youth's hope of a better world in which comprehension, achievement, life and laughter, and stamina will be free in every land.

In the University's growing close relations to the government, through the training of students for the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps, and in many other ways, nearly every department, division, and school of the University has been affected. Under his outstanding and competent leadership, Duke University will survive in her full strength, the war situation and will continue to maintain its high standing among the universities of the country.

Dr. Flowers is a member of the Alpha Tau Omega, Omicron Delta Kappa, and Phi Beta Kappa fraternities. The honorary degree of Master of Arts was given him by Trinity College in 1900. ALUMNI IN THE SERVICE

Jimmie Walker, '42, former S.G.A. Vice President and vigorous campaigner for a place for the independents in politics is now a First Lieutenant in the Marine Corps somewhere in the Pacific. Jimmie has carried his regard for Duke with him to far South Pacific islands and wrote back of his first experience in combat: "It's strange how three years can pass through one's mind in a few brief seconds, but somehow they do. I realize now just how many opportunities were presented to me at Duke University and the people there. Truly our fates have scattered us afar, and I am sure all of us turn often to our 'Alma Mater Dear.' Joys of the past are reflected vividly during the excitement of action; and those of our college days give us moments of brief enjoyment." Even in the Pacific, the lighter side of college life is not forgotten, as Jimmie goes on to say: "There are two Carolina men in this unit with me and I have really been in my glory over the double football victory. They hate to see me come around, they are so sore about the matter."

Back in 1940 Ralph Smyle and Bernard Elias were fraternity brothers at Duke. Elias' hobby had been photography and he had studied the subject in the physics department here and made "Campus Eye" shots for the Quadrangle pictures. Now Smyle and Elias have been together on several photographic missions. All over the world, Duke men who were once students are now going into service together, recalling the old days spent among the Gothic building of their college campus.

From London comes a hearty welcome to all Duke men arriving in England. Jerry Bray, who graduated in '33 is now a Lieutenant Commander, Flag Secretary and aide to Admiral Stark. Bray has had as thrilling a career as any Duke man in service. As aide to the Admiral he has met many of the truly great leaders of the Allied cause, among them the King and Queen of England! As more and more Duke men arrive in Great Britain, Bray looks forward to the day when it may be possible to establish an Alumni Chapter over there. In the meantime he expresses his wish to see Duke boys, assuring us that "to all of them I will be most happy to extend a real 'southern' welcome if they will just give me a ring at U. S. Naval Headquarters, London, England."

Johnny and Martha Lane Forlines are both in the service now. Johnny '39 is a Captain in the Finance Department of the Army while his sister is a gun toting communications officer at Charleston, S. C. Johnny was an A.F.S. instructor on the campus of his Alma Mater. When Duke University presented organizational colors to the A.F.S. Johnny acted as master of ceremonies while Don Perry, former Duke student then an Officer's Candidate in Finance accepted the colors. Captain Forlines is stationed in Boston now lamenting the fact that the residents of that city—having only seen such schools as Harvard—do not appreciate what a real college campus is like.

Peg Forsberg '42 was commissioned an ensign in the WAVES at the same time that Martha Lane Forlines became an officer. Peg, who will always be remembered for her rendition of I'm Ready, Freddie in the 1940 Hoof and Horn show is applying the same enthusiasm to her work with the War Department in Washington. Her former roommate Dot McGunley is also a WAVE in Washington.

Ensign William Ansbro is a Naval flying officer who left Duke at the end of his sophomore year to enter the air corps.

Lt. Leo Roberts has been outside the Continental Limits of U.S.G. for a year a Supply, Disbursing, Commissary and Accounting Officer of "Advance Base" activities of the Navy. When the war is over, Lt. Roberts looks forward to returning to Duke Law School.

Lt. Todd Moore '43 went through the intensive training course at "The West Point of the Air," Randolph Field. He is now a First Lieutenant in the Army Air Corps, stationed somewhere near Honolulu.

Capt. Tom Morrow was on an island in the Pacific "within spitting distance of the Japs" and industriously spending his spare moments teaching his men trigonometry to prepare them for officers training school. Tom says that only soldiers and one lone pine tree populate his island so that even with rationing he would revel at being back in the States.

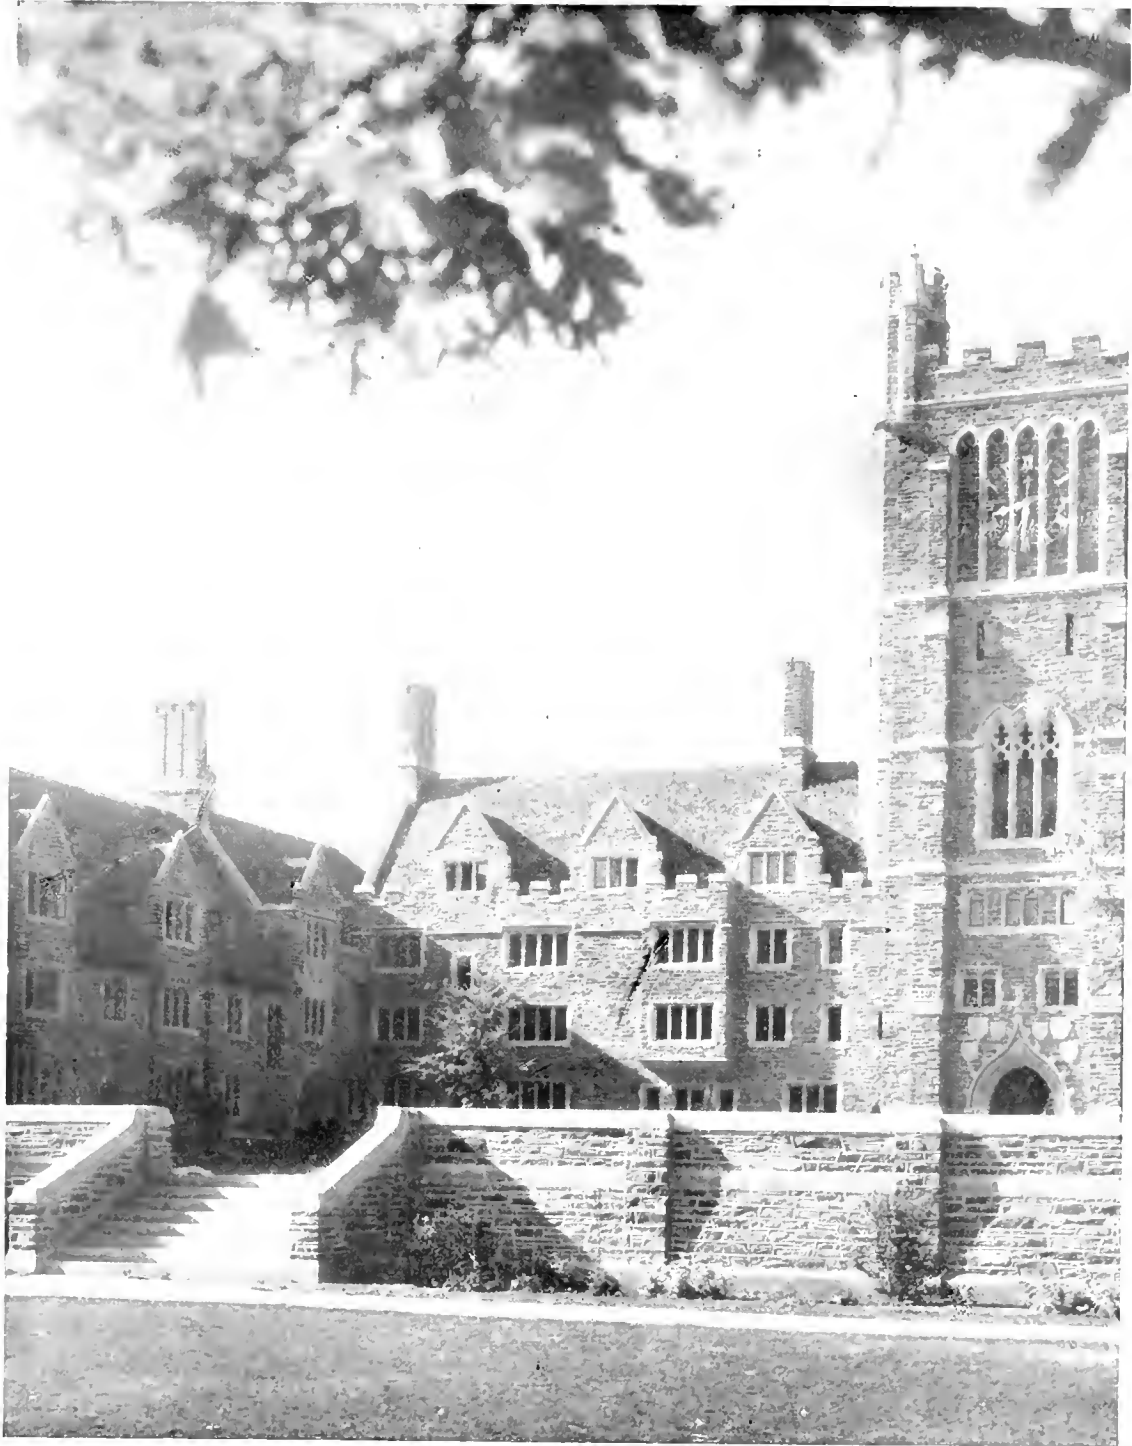

Bob Perdue '40, once a great football player at Duke is now engaged in athletics with a more serious purpose. He is now in charge of athletic activities at an Air Base in Hawaii, putting forth a winning team.

Lt. Ed. Wilson '43 has been awarded the Distinguished Service Cross and is credited with sinking two Jap destroyers. He was decorated in San Francisco by Rear Admiral W. K. Har-rall and after a brief visit to the campus this winter was sent again to the Pacific.

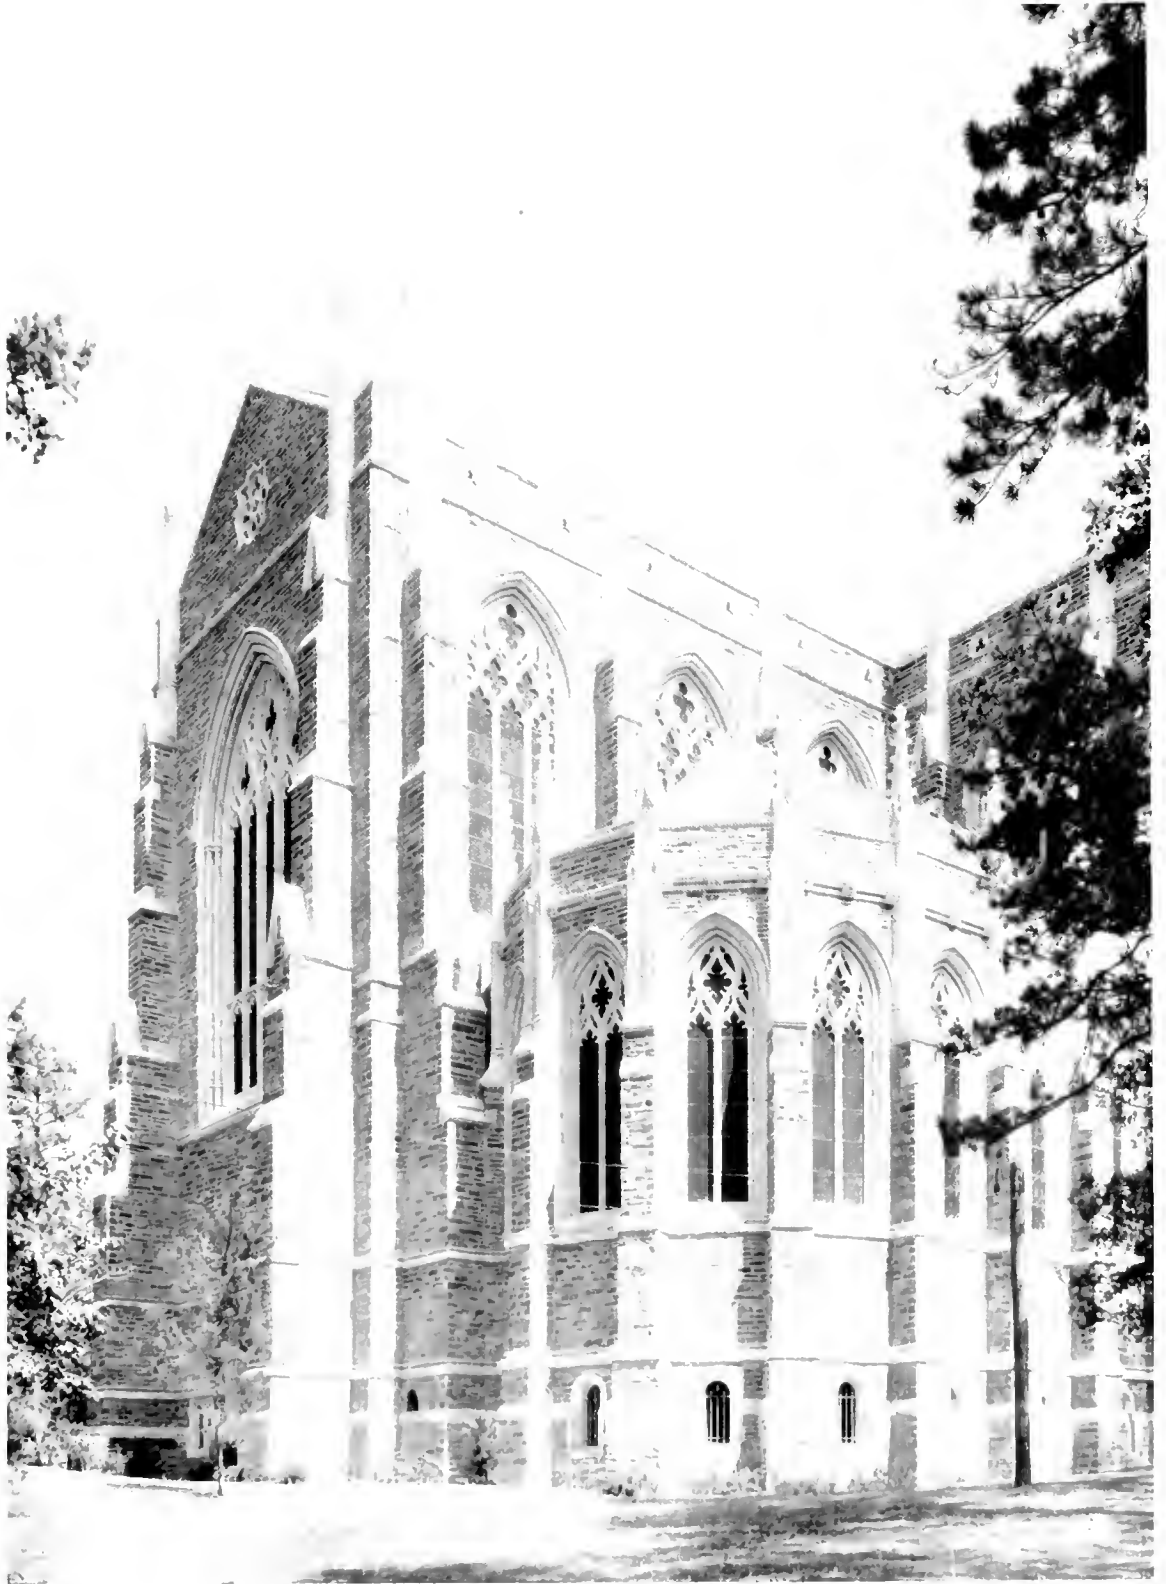

ENSIGN PEG FORSBERG '42

Two Duke alumni have been decorated for gallantry in action. Major Dan Edwards, class of '35, an aide-de-camp to General Eichelberger, has received three awards. In December, 1942, he received the Purple Heart citation as a result of his solicitude for his commanding general during action in the New Guinea Battle Area. He neglected his own person for the benefit of his superior officer. On December 5, 1942, Major Edwards won the Distinguished Service Cross for "extraordinary heroism" near Buna Village. He won the

CLOCK TOWER

CHAPEL FROM THE REAR

Silver Star for a three-day task of reconnoitering enemy machine gun nests and fortified positions near Buna. Lt. j.g. George Patterson, class of '38, was decorated with the Silver Star by Lt. Gen. Mark W.

Another Duke alumnus who has received a decoration is Lt. Kenneth J. Murphy, Army Air Corps, class of '43. He was reported some time ago as "missing in action" in the Pacific area. Lt. Murphy was awarded the Army Air Medal and the Distinguished Flying Cross and then named a captain. COMPREHENSION

A C A D E M I C

COOPERATION AND KNOWLEDGE OF MANKIND— TO FURTHER THE PROGRESS OF CIVILIZATION

Let there be comprehension in our minds—let us understand the temperaments and ideas of our fellow beings and know how to help lead them with decisions that we make just and fair. A clear understanding of people in general, particularly of those surrounding us, an understanding of situations, of motives—all this is implied by the word COMPREHENSION. For those who are our leaders in the government of both campuses, this comprehension is important in order for them to be counted upon to do their jobs to the best of their ability. For those of us who form the student body, whether we be in navy, marine, or civilian life, such an understanding is important to us in our everyday responsibilities.

There is something else just as important to a community as comprehension, and that is cooperation. From personal experience, we all know that cooperation or the lack of it causes success or failure. There must be cooperation if there is anything to be accomplished. The student body, the Student Government—all of us know the important connotation of that word COOPERATION, and we realize that the more of it we have with the faculty, the administration, and with ourselves, the smoother our lives will run this university.

None of us believe there will ever be a utopia—something or someone will always prevent such a thing—but we know that there is no harm done in trying to make this part of the world a better place to live in. We can get further along such a road by stressing the importance of comprehension and cooperation.

Comprehension—so that we can understand life and living, and by this understanding be more capable to judge and help our fellow men. Cooperation—so that we can learn to pull together, and by mutual unanimity be able to further the progress not only of ourselves but of all civilization.

MEN'S S.G.A.

BLANCHARD, STEVENS, MISSEACK, BROGAN, HARDESTY, SCHUCHARDT, NICHOLSON, CRANE.

THE STUDENT COUNCIL has this year been forced to work under completely new circumstances which resulted from the institution of the Naval Program. Because of the influx, it was deemed inadvisable to reconstruct the Student Senate. Despite the difficulties encountered, Student Government has continued to progress toward the goal of genuine self-government.

With the arrival of hundreds of uniformed students came two critical problems. The first problem was that of preventing friction between civilian and non-civilian students. This was done by welding the diverse elements into a unified student body. The second problem was that of creating a social program adequate to meet greatly increasing needs with greatly reduced facilities. The efforts of Student Government in cooperation with other student organizations have been rewarded by results far happier than were anticipated in the beginning.

In so far as was possible, no distinction whatsoever between uniformed and civilian students has been made in academic work or in extracurricular and social activities. At least partially as a consequence of this policy, the Student body is rapidly achieving the unity of former years.

The obstacles encountered in presenting a campus wide recreation program were all but insurmountable. The successful promotion by Student Government of the year's first big dance came as the climax of an extended struggle against labor shortages, the limitations imposed by naval discipline, the lack of orchestras, and the scarcity of unused university facilities. The solution of these difficulties has made it possible for Duke students to spend their leisure hours on the campus rather than on the crowded streets of Durham.

The second semester presented additional problems, most important of which were the maintenance of student organizations still active, and the encouragement of transfer Navy students to participate in extracurricular activities. Because of the pressing need for student organization and leadership, Student Government will continue to operate, unless war conditions make absolutely impossible the purpose for which it was created.

President Barney Brogan deserves much credit for making the Men's Student Government a vital force on the campus this year, not only because of the direct need for an actively functioning force of self-government on the campus, but because of its value as a practice of democracy.

WOMAN'S S.G.A.

AS AN INTEGRAL part of college life, the Woman's Student Government Association now combines its traditional service of linking the students of the Woman's College and its administration, with the additional function of considering the best interests of University women on a war-time campus.

With this aim in view, the Executive Council has endeavored to adjust campus life to the demands made upon it by today's conditions. To further recreation, to establish criteria for conduct (with the help of the students it represents), to foresee and judge new situations which may arise, and to serve the entire college community in its various needs, has been the goal of this war year Council.

In order to realize this goal, the Council has sponsored many of the introductory social functions for new students arriving during the present year. It has investigated and considered measures to be taken to insure the safety of the women and has presented a plan of supervised study for non-C average freshmen. New problems and questions, needing persistent attention to preserve the standards of the University and its students, will continue to present themselves and will be met with the fairest consideration the Student Government can give.

The Judicial Board saw more than ever this year the need for viewing misdemeanors from two angles: that of the good of the University as a whole and that of the welfare of the individual who will continue to live in the group.

To insure the smooth functioning of both the Executive Council and the Judicial Board, the student body is most essential. Because the student government ideal everywhere consists of an administrative body representing the needs and interests of the whole group, each undergraduate woman of the University should feel certain that she may be heard and that her opinions and suggestions will not only be welcomed, but will receive careful consideration. In the final analysis, it is the student body itself which must determine and encourage the progressiveness, the workability and the alertness of such a student government organization.

To encourage this interest of the student body, the Council held open meetings in its room in Faculty Apartments to acquaint the students more intimately with the work of the Council and to inspire their whole-hearted coöperation.

With the continuance of the tri-fold coöperation of students, Council, and Staff, the Woman's Student Government Association may look forward to an even broader scope and greater efficiency than heretofore.

NURSES' S. G. A.

WITH THE NATIONAL demand for nurses culminating in the passage of the Bolton Bill, creating The Nurses' Cadet Corps and the addition of a fourth class to the school of nursing here at Duke, the Nurses' Student Government Association has had an eventful and evolutionary year.

Being one of the several self-governing nursing school student bodies in the South and among the few in the nation, the Duke group has been called upon for aid and advice in formulating plans for the organization of student groups in many similar schools. The association here was organized in 1938 with the purpose of regulating all matters pertaining to student nurses not coming under the jurisdiction of the Education Committee of the Faculty. The policies of the students are carried out by an elected council composed of a president, vice president, secretary, treasurer, chairman of social standards, chairman of athletics, house representative, representatives from the classes, and faculty adviser elected by the council. This group acts in a judiciary as well as administrative capacity, reinforcing rules and regulations, trying cases, and discussing immediate problems.

The social aspect of the organization includes monthly programs held in the Medical School Amphitheater, presenting speakers of particular interest to the students and the discussion of matters pertinent to nursing. The programs during the past year were primarily of a patriotic nature, with informed speakers who had been intimately connected with nursing in the theater of war. The high-light of the social season was the annual S.G.A. Dance held in February in the Durham City Armory.

The athletic activities consisted of intramural participation with organizations of East Campus, organized riding groups at the Hillendale Stables, plans for the establishment of better play equipment, and weekly swimming groups.

The Nurses' Student Government Association has expanded tremendously in membership and scope in the five years since its establishment. With the tripling of the number of students and the perplexing problems precipitated by a world at war, it has assumed much additional responsibility—which in the past year it has dealt with successfully under the able leadership of its president, Mildred Crawley.

With the interest aroused in nursing by the present national and battle needs, the Nurses' Student Government Associations expects that its activities will grow and become an even more important part of the student life of the University in the coming year.

ENGINEERS' S. G. A.

BILL FREEZE, president; ED JOHNSON, treasurer; GEORGE BEER, senior class representative; RALPH SCHNEIDER, junior class representative; BILL PALMER, sophomore class representative.

THOUGH the Engineers' Student Government was not so active during the the past two terms as in years past, it was functioning and was successful in sponsoring its Engineers' Ball late in February. Between July and November, the organization was suspended pending the action to be taken by the Navy. In November, however, with only half its council present, the ESGA was reorganized and its work carried on as in other semesters.

The big project of the year was the return to Southgate of the Engineers' Ball. This was completed after much hard work. The dance was February 12 and marked one of the better dances on the campus for the year. The dance was very similar to those previously held in Southgate. Decorations were barred by the University ruling, but they were replaced with objects belonging to the various Engineering groups.

The officers of the group were Tom Hatley (graduated in October), president; Bill Freeze (acting president for November-February semester), vice president; Chuck Mapp (graduated in October), secretary; Ed Johnson (acting secretary-treasurer for November-February semester), treasurer; Carl Metz (graduated in October), and George Beer, senior representatives; Ralph Schneider, junior class representative; Wallace McMahan (in armed forces in July) and Bill Palmer, sophomore representative.

In the latter part of the semester and at the suggestion of the leaders on the campus, the governing council was reorganized so as to give the various military groups representation. A council was set up with a president, vice president, secretary-treasurer, and representatives from the Navy, Marine, N.R.O.T.C. and Civilian groups. Elections were held just before exams with the following results: Bill Freeze, president; Alex Shaw, vice president; Ed Johnson, secretary-treasurer; Ralph Schneider, Navy Representative; Neal McGuire, Civilian representative; and Jim Artley, Marine representative. The N.R.O.T.C. representative is to be elected later.

Plans are for this group to sponsor another Engineers' Ball as well as several open houses during the year. Introduction to campus activities to the transfer students is another project to be undertaken by the ESGA.

The organization has been fortunate in that it has been able to include in its membership the various service groups on the campus. In this new membership, the organization has found fresh ideas and a push to activities. Therefore the Engineer's Student Government Association expects its work to grow.

SOCIAL STANDARDS

Second row: Kearns, Crigger, Greenwell, Holcombe, Watkins, Rauchinburg, Mattox, Woody, Bloom, Wimberly, McGriff.

WITH THE CHANGE in times, the Social Standards Committee has endeavored to change and modify the standards first adopted by the Committee, keeping in mind the fundamental principles upon which the Committee must operate. Its purpose is twofold; first that it adopt certain standards to become an integral part of the life of Duke women, and second, that it promote social activity on the campus. Guided by Dorothy Watkins, Chairman; and Miss Mary Grace Wilson, Adviser, the committee has met the new war-time conditions by eliminating decorations at dances, thus minimizing costs of entertainment without destroying the spirit of Duke's social tradition.

The year of social get-togethers began by dances given in the Ark for freshmen and transfers, offering the newcomers an introduction to Duke social life. Committee Members, aided by members of the Men's Freshman Advisory Council, created an air of informality and friendliness.

On Thanksgiving Eve, the Social Standards Committee gave its annual Coed Ball. The committee's traditional figure was led by Dorothy Watkins and Josephine Beaver, Chairman of the Ball. Members of the Committee wore white gowns and carried red roses. The figure consisted of a spiral formation, at the end of which the group formed one large circle for the entrance of the CHANTICLEER Beauty Queen, Miss Dottie Groome. The Beauty Queen entered wearing a black cape and mask, escorted by Henry Nicholson, Editor-in-Chief of the CHANTICLEER, who unmasked her and crowned her Queen of the Ball. She was followed by two pages carrying her flowers and the crown. After the ball, the Social Standards Committee members and their escorts were served breakfast in Brown House parlor.

Later activities included open houses for students and faculty, dances in the Ark for upper classmen, get-togethers for new students entering on the Navy Program, and the traditional Spring Coed Ball.

Each year the Social Standards Committee plans a project which is presented in the form of a gift to the University. Last year the Committee contributed to the Alice Baldwin Scholarship Fund.

The Committee published its second Social Standards handbook which was distributed to the coeds. This handbook was begun last year with the purpose of clarifying the standards which Duke women are expected to uphold.

SENIOR CLASS OFFICERS

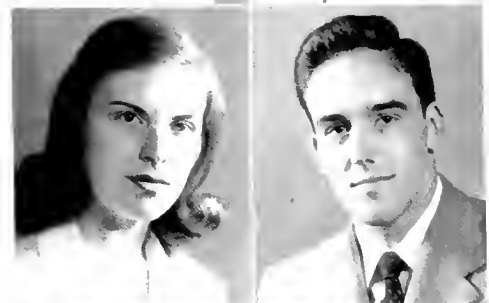

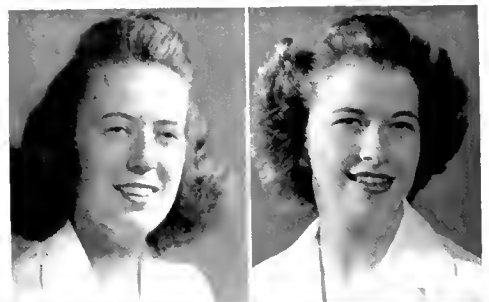

THE SENIOR CLASS of 1944 has seen the complete transition from a peacetime campus to a Duke University at war. Of all the preceding classes who remember the old pre-war collegiate days of more leisurely examination schedules, spring vacations, big name bands, fraternity dances and formal dinners on East—we alone have seen the installation of the V-12 program on campus and an academic year with four commencements.

The changes on campus have been reflected in our individual lives so that our plans after graduation are all determined by our role in the war effort. Our four years, or less, at Duke, while influenced by international events, have still retained much of the usual college life.

There are opportunities which we have carelessly permitted to slip by, and a few modest dreams which we have managed to transform into realities. We have found that there are many things in college life which even the war has not greatly altered: classes, dormitory life, and three meals a day in the Union.

Now that we are about to leave we can venture only a guess as to our future. Of one thing alone are we certain. The inspiration and vision we have gained, the priceless friendships we have made, will remain with us throughout the coming years. The larger perspective, the greater insight, and increased understanding which we have gained here will be with us in future days to enrich our lives and the lives of those with whom we come in contact.

Junior Class Officers

TWO YEARS had past when we juniors returned this school term to add a few more hours, quality points, and gray hairs to our school careers. This year has been for us a serious time. Many have accelerated; others have left their studies to go to war. However, those of us who remained on campus found that "life as usual" was the practical motto whenever possible.

Our activities, both social and service have been flavored with the spice of war. The class has assisted with the War Loan Drives in Durham, by selling stamps and bonds, by supplying workers for the Duke alumni office to help write letters to Duke boys overseas and to keep the campus posted on their whereabouts, and by studying hard. The class average this year has seemed to indicate that there is much more to a brain than the one-fifth which is ordinarily used by college students. We juniors have shown ourselves to be far more serious-minded than former students of our age and rank.

However, now that we face the last year of our sheltered college life and feel the winds of the world blowing in our faces, we smile over the interesting remembrances we have of our class fellowship, of the dances sponsored by the Class of '45, of the food-selling expeditions in the dormitories, of the class meetings and the committees and projects which we have seen through.

These experiences have helped knit the class together into a unit of strong backing for our new president, Lee Howard, who takes departing Cam's place. Now that we are clad in our senior jackets and possessors of three-fourths of a college education, we look to next year as the climax to a grand phase of life.

WE'RE SOPHOMORES now. It was a nice feeling to be able to come back this year and know that we were no longer the babies of "dear old Duke." We could now show the freshmen how to behave. We knew a lot more about the "ins and outs" of college life. Then, too, there were new interests on West which we were looking forward to seeing and meeting.

The year opened with the Sandals doing an excellent job during Freshman Week, helping the freshmen in every possible way. Different members of the class assumed jobs in W.S.G.A., Social Standards, the "Y," the W.A.A., and other campus organizations. Class plans developed, Goon Day proving to be one of the best the campus has ever seen. Our project of open houses after the Sunday night Sing proved a success, as well as Class social events, highlighted by the BQS-SANDALS dance, which went over with a real bang.

War had changed many things and had brought many new jobs of knitting, rolling bandages, service dances, and other tasks—all of which we did with a will and purpose. There are in our memories of this sophomore year dances, football, basketball, occasional cabin parties, and, of course books.

Thus the days have rolled by amid our work and play, and now we suddenly realize that we are almost Juniors. As we look back over our second year of college, we find that some of our dreams have been realized; many others have not. We are still working to make that average, get into certain organizations, or find our "O.A.O." We are looking forward to new achievements and pleasures in the coming year, planning to make the class of '46 the very best.

Freshman Class Officers

THE FRESHMAN class seems to have a good mixture of brains and beauty. We feel confident in ourselves as a class, and hope that four years from now, most of us will still be together, having as much fun and earnestness as we now have.

Arriving in Durham last September, we began at once to be taught what college life is during Freshman week. Freshman advisers, placement tests, and getting-acquainted are part of our memories.

The first thing that deflated our ego was the arrival of the upperclassmen. Soon followed dreaded "Goon Day." Pajamas, pig-tails, and serfdom imposed by the sophomores were the order of the day. And then, all too soon, came the first set of tests—midsemesters.

After this, we began to mark off days until Christmas, but keeping up with our daily classes and assemblies—four of them a week, with the ensuing rush each time to get in the Union line.

But all was not moans and groans. The numerous dances met with our approval, as did football and West Campus. One of the best of these dances was the F.A.C. dance when Charlotte Crane was voted the Freshman Beauty Queen of 1943-44.

The great ordeal was still ahead of us when the F.A.C. dance was over: EXAMS! We struggled, slaved, and missed sleep. Our eyes grew heavier, our minds feebler, and the clock seemed to race to 9 A.M. or 2 P.M. Grades came out making parents, faculty, and Freshmen sad and disillusioned but hopeful about the next semester.

College is a grand place any time, but when it's Duke with a Freshman Class like this one, the outlook for the class of 1947 is a cheering one.

ORGANIZATIONS

ORLD-WIDE CONFIDENCE AND FRIENDSHIP THE RESULTS OF ORGANIZATION

Organizations have always been a stimulus for achievement. To us as individuals, they offer an opportunity for self-improvement and advancement. More important than that, these organizations offer us chances to form lasting friendships with the people with whom we work. They give us confidence in our work—confidence that helps us push ahead with new ideas and improved talents. The importance of these organizations can never be underestimated in its benefits to the individual or to society. It is through organizations that individuals can bring out new plans and ideas for the progress of civilization.

Here at Duke, we are given opportunities for achievement in almost every field of study. Whether it be in dramatics, in medicine, or in war work, there are organizations that we can join, and that will give us new responsibilities, show us new methods of improving our abilities. It is up to each of us alone to prove ourselves capable of joining such groups. Our past achievements and our present talents are taken into consideration before we are permitted to become members. When we have become a member, we feel a certain satisfaction, being confident that our past work has deserved merit. And yet we must remember that our work should not stop here, that we should continue to use whatever talents we may have. That is the purpose of every organization—to act as an inspiration for us to do better work. This is true not only for those organizations on campus that are formed for academics, but also for those formed for citizenship and character.

Very few of us can achieve success alone. The older we become, the more we realize the truth of this statement and recognize the importance of having an organization to act as a goal and later to act as a helping hand to our future activities. It is the right of every individual to be able to join an organization to which he can give his ideas and from which he can gain incentive for further achievement. We get out of them what we put into them; and from them we can obtain much in the way of friendships, confidence in ourselves and our accomplishments, and inspiration for our present and future work.

PHI ETA SIGMA

WHEN THE DUKE CHAPTER of Phi Eta Sigma was established in 1931, it set its scholastic requirements of eligibility at an average of 2.25 quality points per semester hour. This average, as was first required in the constitution, had to be maintained for an entire semester.

In an endeavor to promote scholarship on the campus, Phi Eta Sigma presents awards each year for freshman attainments of scholarship. In the past, at the end of each semester and midsemester, the Society has presented a scholarship plaque to the freshman house averaging the greatest number of quality points per man. This year, because of the Naval V-12 Unit, the freshmen were no longer able to live as a group in the Freshman dormitories, and the awarding of the plaque was therefore impossible. Phi Eta Sigma's second award is a cup presented to the fraternity pledge group with the greatest average increase in quality points. Winning these awards is considered as a very distinct honor by the various freshman houses and fraternities, and the prizes serve in this way to raise materially the scholastic standards of the whole campus.

The greatest service rendered to Duke by Phi Eta Sigma is that of scholarship aid to the freshmen. During the fall semester of this year, the Society functioned with the cooperation of the Freshman Advisory Council to assist a large number of freshmen having difficulties with their studies. Its members have devoted a generous part of their time to scholastic aid, and the results this year have been more than satisfactory.

The activities of Phi Eta Sigma have never been extensive, but men are always anxious to attain membership into the organization because of the honorary position it holds on the campus. Navy life at Duke has eliminated the peacetime tapping ceremonies, but otherwise the fraternity functions as it always has. Every new member is presented with a key to signify his membership and is entitled to attend the annual Phi Eta Sigma banquet which is held as further recognition of his honor. This banquet also serves to initiate new men who have proven their scholastic ability.

Membership in Phi Eta Sigma is a goal for every freshman to work and study for. It gives the freshmen who have attained this high scholastic average a little of the public acclaim which is due them. With this organization on campus, the freshman can know that he may gain not only the personal sense of satisfaction that accompanies work well done, but the public recognition that his work merits.

IN 1939, A DEFINITE need for a freshman honorary scholastic organization for women, to correspond to Phi Eta Sigma for men, was recognized. In answer to this need, Ivy was formed with the purpose of encouraging high scholarship along with a well-balanced college life. Ivy has been proud of its history and hopes to serve as an encouragement for scholastic aspirations in the freshman class.

To be eligible for Ivy recognition, a freshman must make a scholastic average of 2.25 quality points for each semester hour for all semester hours carried during the first semester of the freshman year or for the whole year. From the class of 1946, twenty-six women became eligible for Ivy honors in the spring; and five more attained this distinction at the end of second semester. These women have the privilege of wearing the Ivy key as a token to encourage them and others to still higher goals of attainment.

Although Ivy is primarily an honorary scholastic organization, it carries on many other duties that are prominent in campus activities. The girl dressed in white with a long green sash is always ready to help at formal functions for the Women's College, for the honor of marshaling at these functions has been given to Ivy. It is customary in the fall of each year for Ivy to give a tea for the freshmen who have made a B average at Mid-semester. Also, in the spring a tea is given for those who have made a B average, with the hope of being able to initiate them in the coming fall of the next college year.

The high point of the year for Ivy members is the recognition service held for those freshmen girls who have made an Ivy average. At a Student Government meeting in the spring the president of Ivy calls each girl to the front of the auditorium. Here they are given an Ivy leaf to symbolize their distinction. The Ivy leaf was chosen as the emblem of this organization because of its symbolic use by the Romans to represent attainment of knowledge. Thus to be a member of Ivy is one of the highest honors a freshman can attain.

In the words of the initiation ceremony, "Ivy strives to stimulate intellectual curiosity in freshmen women and to foster a well-rounded personality. In attaining this goal, it urges each member to value the gaining of knowledge and the building of character above the mere earning of grades."

The officers of Ivy for this year were Jane Watson, president; Beatrix Gross, vice president; Althea Hill, secretary; Carol Stark, treasurer; and Elizabeth Prather, Ivy reporter. Mrs. W. S. Persons served as Ivy adviser.

BETA OMEGA SIGMA, honorary sophomore leadership fraternity, found its functions somewhat curtailed under the Navy V-12 program. In normal times, BΩΣ members conducted an intensive program for incoming freshmen, enforcing a number of traditional freshman rules.

However, in 1943-44, a large number of the freshman class entered as V-12 students under Navy rules, and it was not thought practicable to enforce additional regulations.

In addition to its duties of acquainting freshmen with Duke traditions, BΩΣ in past years acted as one of the leading campus service organizations, sponsoring air raid warden training and the Freshman-Sophomore Field Day. These activities were likewise deemed impractical this year.

Nevertheless, BΩΣ recognized the outstanding extracurricular work of twenty-six January and July freshmen by tapping them in an impressive ceremony at intermission of the annual Sandals-BΩΣ dance in February. These new members of BΩΣ were not subjected to the traditional informal initiation, but the annual banquet was a highlight of the spring activities.

THE SOPHOMORE honorary society, Sandals, one of the outstanding organizations on East Campus, is composed of girls who were prominent in the previous freshman class. Its twenty members worked together this year to carry out their objectives which resemble greatly those of Beta Omega Sigma on the West Campus.

The twenty women who compose Sandals are chosen by the Executive Council of that organization and are selected at the end of their freshman year at a very impressive tapping ceremony in the Women's College Auditorium. Their appointment is not only an honor, a reward for past accomplishments, but it carries with it a pledge for future service to the college. The girls receiving this appointment have manifested during their freshman year high qualities of scholarship, leadership, character, and service.

The organization was founded in 1932, and since then its members have assumed certain specific duties. Freshman Week opens their year of activity by calling for guides for new girls and their parents, helpers in registration, and proctors of placement exams. Later on, the major responsibilities of the Sandals are to serve as hostesses in the Ark, to take attendance at Student Government meetings, and to perform other

The organization is one of the oldest honorary fraternities at Duke University. In its first twenty-four years it served as a service and disciplinary group, and in 1942 it was re-established under an amended charter as a service organization only, with power to establish freshman regulations, but not to enforce them directly.

With the revised function, the group proved itself still of value to freshmen. Its leadership has shown itself readily adaptable to the changed conditions around it. Any doubt that may have been held about the continuance of the organization this year was dispelled by the interest that many members of the V-12 unit, as well as civilian freshmen, showed in extracurricular work. Thus the group was able to continue its usual point system and tap men eligible.

regular campus duties. The Ark is used, opened, and supervised each night by a Sandal as a recreational center for dancing, playing games, or reading. This year the procurement of a "juke box" has made the Ark an even more popular place than ever before. Canteens, sponsored by the Senior class, for the boys on West Campus, and other important social receptions are held here.

Sandals, by serving as an intermediary between the Student Government Association and the student body, acts as an assistant to the Council. It also assists socially by holding a Sandals-Student Government banquet in honor of the new members of both organizations, and it holds an annual dance with Beta Omega Sigma which has always been a great success both socially and financially.

Under the expert advisership of Mrs. Schrader, the former Miss Ditlevson, Sandals has closed a very successful year by recognizing changed as well as changing conditions. It is becoming more and more a progressive organization, always willing and ready to take over new needs arising on campus. Sandals hopes that in the coming year their successors will make the year as profitable or more than it has been this year.

ALTHOUGH encountering many new difficulties that must be expected in a college under military control, the Pre-Medical Society, founded on March 12, 1937, has more than ever sought to promote the original aims and purposes of the society: to serve as a coöperative center for intelligent pre-medical students and the faculties of both undergraduate and medical schools; to develop among the pre-medical students an ever-increasing sense of the high standards of character and responsibility embodied in the medical profession; and to stimulate within the minds of the Pre-Medical students the correlation of a general cultural background with the more specific Pre-Medical training.

The membership, which is based on scholastic achievement, personality, interest, and other recommendations, was increased over last year with a total of seventy-five members despite the loss of many of its members to the draft and to various medical schools. Officers are elected from the rising junior and senior members each spring. This past year, transfers and second-semester freshmen were admitted, contrary to the original provision made in the constitution of the Society. Forty-five new members were initiated at the annual initiation banquet this semester.

During the year, members heard lectures given by various professors of the Medical School. Other lecturers spoke on other topics of interest in the field of medicine. With the lectures, moving pictures were shown from time to time. Most of the movies showed complex surgical operations and techniques. Supervised tours of the hospital were made in which the society saw operations and demonstrations of valuable instruments.

In the past, the Society has not only tried to benefit its own members, but it has tried to help the other pre-medical students solve their varied problems. The Society is now doing its utmost to help young pre-medical students adjust themselves to college life in war time.

As can be seen by the picture, girls as well as men pre-medical students are included in the organization. Many of these girls will continue into Medical School with the men; others will get jobs in industry as chemists, and others will work as zoölogists. All have an interest, however, in this field. Although they may not specifically use the information that they have gained through the group discussions, tours, and lectures, it will always be valuable to them. This fact applies to the men who do not continue with medicine as well as the women.

An especially valuable work of the Society this year was the assistance that was given to young medical hopefuls, who this year are for the most part younger than in previous years. Consequently, the organization can give them more than ordinary help in orientation to medical matters.

Another service that the organization can render is to assist young men, especially civilians, in making contacts that will help them to enter the Medical School and to get into a suitable branch of the armed services.

The organization has its social side too. Here, members may meet and talk with others interested in the sciences and with the special guests who have been invited to speak. After some of the meetings, a short social session is held, with refreshments being served. The women are in a minority, but that does not prevent a good time on the part of all members. Both educational and social are the open houses that are held for students who have shown an interest in the Society, and who are prospective members.

Talks that were of especial interest to the young members that we have mentioned before were given by Mrs. Sweet and Mr. Hetherington, adviser of the organization. Mrs. Sweet explained to the group the Naval and Army training, and clarified the entrance requirements to Medical School. Mr. Hetherington's topic was "Methods of Study," and he included an explanation of why certain subjects were required and what they meant to the student. Dr. Grey, assistant adviser, also helped the organization in many ways.

In closing, we must not forget the primary purpose—to prepare students for their future medical career; and it is in place here to say a few words about the Duke Medical School, which most of these students will enter. It was established in 1925 through the generosity of the late James B. Duke. It has been approved as class A by the American Medical Association. On January 3, 1944, three hundred and two students were enrolled. To these students are offered complete modern equipment for the diagnosis and care of patients.

COMMODORES' CLUB

THE COMMODORES' CLUB, social organization for members of the Naval Reserve Officers' Training Corps, carried out an active program for its members this year and through its efficiency, paved the way for the possible future organization of similar social clubs among the other military groups now stationed at Duke.

Officers of the Commodores' Club during the past two semesters were as follows: Benny Cittadino, President; Bill Alexander, Jr., Vice President; Ed Bennett, Secretary; Wesley Davis, Treasurer; and Hal Landesberg and Tim Moore, co-chairmen of the social committee. Lt. Commander F. H. Stubbs, USN, was the adviser for the group.

The Duke Dolphin, monthly publication of the NROTC battalion, had a successful year, providing an outlet for Navy talent, publishing stories and articles of interest to the members of the unit. Dick Arrowsmith was Editor, with Dick Beddingfield as Associate Editor.

The club sponsored seven well-attended and successful social events. The Naval ROTC students first staged a stag swimming party at Duke Park during the summer semester, followed by a tea dance at the Morris Street USO, shortly after the women returned. The "big NROTC weekend" in November saw the club sponsoring a cabin party at the Forest Hills country club on a Friday night, with the third annual NROTC Ball following the next evening. At this ball, highlight of the NROTC social season, Dot Hyland was crowned as the Navy Queen, with Dottie Groome and Merthel Greenwell chosen as sponsors for Companies A and B.

Later in the semester, the club successfully presented another USO dance, followed by another country club cabin party. Final event in the calendar was the stag banquet at the Washington Duke hotel at the close of the semester in February, in honor of the first class of NROTC students to be commissioned from the local unit. The eighty new ensigns were presented with their ensigns' bars as a gift from the battalion. The banquet, originally planned to honor only the eleven seniors receiving their commissions at the end of the semester, was even more important in view of the fact that an additional seventy-odd first classmen had received sudden orders to prepare for commissioning and immediate sea duty only a few days before. These men had been scheduled for one more semester at Duke, which would have enabled them to graduate. Dr. Malcolm McDermott of the Duke Law school was the principal speaker, with Capt. Clay saying a few words to the departing members of the unit.

A. S. M. E.

THE AMERICAN SOCIETY of Mechanical Engineers granted its charter to members of the engineering school of Duke University in 1934, and since then, the local chapter has developed along the lines laid out for it by the national society with the purpose of bringing the students into closer contact with practicing engineers than they would ordinarily come in a curricular study program.

This year, the student branch continued during the school year 1943-44, to carry out its objectives under the enthusiastic leadership of its president, Joe Myers. The purposes of this branch has been to increase the student interest in engineering subjects and to acquaint them with the practical applications of engineering studies.

To attain this goal, the chapter held frequent meetings to discuss specific engineering problems and to receive distinguished guest speakers. Several inspection trips were made during the year. The outstanding ones were to the Duke Power Steam Plant in Salisbury, North Carolina, and to the Sectional Conference in Baltimore, Maryland.

The organization carried on the usual active program of academic and social affairs, as well as coöperating with other organizations and the campus community as a whole. The group also attempted to show the advances that have been made in the field of engineering during war time and to emphasize the important part that the present members will be able to play in a warring world. Since engineering plays so important a part in winning the war, the organization expects that it will be able to continue throughout the war with a capable and interested membership.

The Society inaugurated its present spring semester by installing the newly elected officers' positions. The presidential seat vacated by the graduation of Joe Myers was taken over by Hugh Evans, while Bill Dackis filled the position of vice president. Gill Brandon and Claude Williams assumed the posts of secretary and treasurer respectively. Under the leadership of these men, the group expects to enlarge its membership and to maintain the standards set by former groups; for, although the group is faced with the turnover of membership that all male organizations on campus are experiencing, it has an excellent helping hand in its adviser, Professor Tiess.

THE LOCAL student chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineers saw many changes during the past year. Among these changes were the change over from a civilian school to a training post for Navy, Marine, and Coast Guard Trainees, and the uncertainty of obtaining speakers because of the war-time conditions.

In March, 1943, the officers for the year were elected. They were William W. Karl, president from Tarrytown, N. Y.; William Black, vice president from Durham, N. C.; and William Freeze, Charlotte, N. C., secretary-treasurer. Between March and July there were several meetings. Miss Louise Hall gave a very interesting talk on Aerial Photographs; Bill Black spoke of his work at Camp Butner and Joe Rugo told of his experience at an Ordnance Depot.

Soon after the numerous transfer students, representing N. C. State, Auburn, The Citadel, and Tennessee, were familiar with the local campus and organizations, a meeting was held, and a new secretary-treasurer, George Brockway, was elected to replace Bill Freeze.

The first of November saw many new transfers and the return of several Duke men. John Theriault, a Navy Trainee, spoke of the Navy Sea-bees at this meeting. At the following meeting, Bill Freeze gave a talk of the engineering work he was on during the summer, the Clinton Engineering project. E. Willard Berry, Associate Professor of Geology, was the guest speaker at the January meeting. At the second January meeting, Lt. Bowerman (C.E.C.); U. S. N. R., and Lt. Glison, (SC) U. S. N. R. told of the Sea-bees and their work in Alaska around the Dutch Harbor and Kiska area.

At the February meeting, the last one before another class was to be graduated, new officers were elected. They were: President, Alex Shaw, Miami, Fla.; Vice President, Bill Freeze, Charlotte, N. C.; Secretary-treasurer, Stuart Jenks, Richmond, Va.

These officers were installed at the March meeting. Also at this March meeting, Mr. Ralph E. Lewis, engineering professor of drawing, gave a very interesting talk on the strengths of the navies of the various powers of the world.

Prof. Harold C. Bird served as the faculty adviser.

THE PURPOSE of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers is to aid in the development of latent abilities of students, both in curricular fields and in leadership. In spite of the accelerated program which the war effort has imposed on the engineering school, the electrical engineering students have felt that continuation of the activities of the Student Branch of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers was essential to their technical education. The Student Branch has continued, therefore, to provide a means by which the students could present a program including talks to their fellow students on various subjects of interest to electrical engineers; and on occasion, members of the faculty and practising engineers have addressed the branch. Meetings have been held about once a month, and in each of these meetings an effort has been made to present to the students, material of either a technical or non-technical nature which would not ordinarily be dealt with in the classroom.

Among the activities carried on during the year are several talks given by student members, a talk by Professor Hornell Hart, and a talk supplemented by an inspection trip conducted by Dr. Robert J. Reeves through the X-ray department of Duke Hospital. In addition to these activities, the Student Branch was represented at the Southern District Student Conference of the A.I.E.E. at Roanoke Va., by the student branch chairman and the branch counselor, Professor Meir. The social program carried out by the student members included two lab parties, at which they baffled their girls with circuits, diagrams, oscillographs and an array of strange equipment. At these parties, students had an opportunity to get together with their instructors and to show their dates some of their strange element.

The Duke University Branch of The American Institute of Electrical Engineers was started in 1927 when Professor Walter J. Seely made application to the national organization for a charter. Since that date the branch has become increasingly active until at the present time the entire senior class is enrolled in the Institute.

During the summer semester the officers of the branch were Stephen C. Clark, Chairman; Richard E. Nelson, Vice Chairman; Thomas Hatley, Treasurer; and Kenneth E. Sanger, Secretary. Upon the graduation of most of these officers in October the offices were filled by Kenneth E. Sanger, D. Jack Maxwell, Donald H. Sterrett, and Charles R. Myers respectively.

ALPHA TAU CHAPTER of Kappa Delta Pi, honorary education fraternity, is now in its sixteenth year on the Duke campus. The organization is composed both of students and members of the faculty who meet together twice a month. The fraternity is not only honorary but is also professional in that it promotes the teaching profession in every way possible.

Once a month, evening meetings are held in the homes of various faculty members. These meetings feature a special program and a social hour. The programs this year have consisted of reports of experiments in education made on our campus, such as that made by Dr. Brownell; discussions and talks on various educational problems of current interest; and round-table discussions at which teachers in the Durham Public Schools have been our guests. One very interesting meeting featured a quiz program on Kappa Delta Pi in which the faculty members were given a chance to show how much or how little they knew about the organization. These meetings are greatly enjoyed by all since they give the students a chance to meet some of their professors outside of the classroom. During the CHI DELTA PHI, an honorary literary society for women, was founded at the University of Tennessee by Charles R. Morse in 1919. In 1922, the women of Trinity College felt the need of an organization similar to the men's literary groups, and the Zeta Chapter of National Society Chi Delta Phi was established here on campus. Its aims are to encourage interest in literature, to encourage participation in the different fields of writing—poetry, the short story, essays—and to provide recognition of those girls whose interest in literature and whose creative work has been outstanding. Above all, its purpose is to be an organization where such girls can meet with others so interested, talk over mutual problems, and profit by friendly criticism of their work.

Zeta's methods of accomplishing these aims change with the years, but the underlying purpose remains the same. This year's program includes our traditional informal discussion meetings, and increased participation in the national program through contributions to our national magazine, the annual Prose and Poetry contest, and to all campus publications. In addition, we plan to widen our campus interests by paying more attention to journalism, heretofore more or less neglected, and to become better acquainted with the outstanding figures in our Faculty Dining room.

Kappa Delta Pi is proud of its large student membership this year. Members are chosen by the fraternity on the basis of general scholarship and work in the field of Education. The fraternity was founded at the University of Illinois, June 8, 1911, and now has 131 active chapters in institutions of learning all over the country. The fraternity key is a scroll on which appears the beehive and the Greek letters $\kappa \Delta \Pi$. The colors are jade-green and violet.

The purpose of the organization is to encourage in its members interest in the teaching profession and a desire to live by the ideals and high standards of the profession.

The publication of the organization is the Educational Forum which is full of articles on current subjects of interest written by experts in the various fields.

The officers for this year are President, Kathryn Gilliam; Vice President, Frances Thackston; Secretary, Jane Bendall; and Treasurer, Evelyn Trudell. We owe a constant vote of thanks to Dr. John Carr, our faculty adviser, for his help and enthusiasm for the work of the organization.

quainted with the outstanding figures in our English department.

To better incorporate journalism and campus publications, the new policy is to invite girls who are outstanding, though not necessarily creative, and who are interested, enthusiastic leaders in campus literary groups.

Zeta started out this year under something of a handicap as it had lost all but seven of its former members because of people graduating or leaving school for other reasons; but in spite of everything, we are underway again and really going strong. Under the capable leadership of our officers: Virginia Ward, president; Lloyd Bailey, vice president; Ann Succop, secretary; Carol Phipps, treasurer; and Helen Kindler, Editor, we have done much to accomplish our aim.

We pledged a group of talented and versatile girls this fall, having initiated them right after Christmas. We look for much achievement from them. Poetry, fiction, journalism—Chronicle, Archive, CHANTICLEER—they are all well-represented in our sisterhood. Whether or not we produce another Willa Cather or Edna St. Vincent Millay, time alone will tell. Meanwhile we write on, doing all we can to improve our work and to uphold the standards.

TAU PSI OMEGA

BEGINNING the year with the installation of Gamma chapter at the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina in Greensboro, Tau Psi Omega, national honorary French fraternity, continued the rapid progress which has marked the organization since its founding at Duke in 1938.

Plans for the first national convention of Tau Psi Omega, to be held at Duke in the spring, have been completed. Beta chapter, at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, is entering its third year of activity. Newly founded Gamma chapter held its first meeting with seven members of the faculty and nineteen students.

In addition to this program of expansion, the fraternity is active on campus in furthering interest in the French language and in giving recognition to outstanding French students. Members of the French faculty were present at the many open houses and meetings of the organization.

The fraternity pledged many new members this year. Despite the small number of men remaining in the organization, activities of the group were comparatively unimpaired. The emphasis on French cultural traditions is still high in the interest of the club, although the annual dramatic production in French has had to be discontinued until the end of the war.

Members of the organization are unanimous in their attitude towards France in the war. They hope for a complete restoration of the French republic, and believe in the aims of De Gaulle and Giraud, the leaders of the Republic of France.

Two initiations were held during the year. Joint meetings with the other two chapters were planned. The meetings, both business and social, were held biweekly throughout the year. As in former years, Priscilla Alden, one of the founders of the fraternity, deserves much credit for its activities.

The fraternity has adopted a charter and a seal which will be used on all charters and on certificates of membership. This seal resembles the emblem found on the key worn by all members, and is symbolic of the ideals of Tau Psi Omega. With this key as a reminder, each member may carry these ideals with him.

Dr. and Mrs. Neal Dow, of the department of Romance Languages, are advisers of Tau Psi Omega. Officers for the year were: Frank Micara, president; Dottie Stackhouse, vice president; Barbara Ramsey, secretary; and Joe Gudstadt, treasurer.

STUDENT FORUM

ONLY A SMALL GROUP, but one with a definitely important task on the Duke campus is the Student Forum Committee consisting of six hard working senior women, chosen for their leadership, personality, and capability. Under the auspices of the Woman's College these women help bring cultural entertainment to the university community. This committee was established in the spring of 1935 as a subcommittee of the Women's Student Council, its primary purpose being the selection of speakers and performers that would satisfy nearly nine hundred women and at the same time, remain within a limited budget.

Looking back at the past year, the Student Forum realizes with great satisfaction that it could not have done any better in its choice of personalities. Cecil Brown, ace reporter, having just returned from war-torn Europe, was the one to start off this season with great success. Afterwards, the Forum continued to present outstanding personalities, bringing the blind pianist, Alec Templeton to the campus just at the close of the first semester.

Until this year, the presentation of famous people was the only function of the Forum. This year, however, something new in the history of the University was originated—the Student Forum Poll. By means of this poll, the majority opinion of women students can easily be determined whenever a controversial issue arises. Questions of vital importance were presented to the students not only concerning campus affairs but also of nation-wide interest.

The financial backing of the Forum consists of a dollar fee which each member of the Woman's College pays at the beginning of the school year. With approximately nine hundred dollars, then, the initial speakers may be brought. If the speaker is of sufficient interest, as many seats as are available are sold to people from town.

It was through the able leadership of Joyce Thresher that the Student Forum fulfilled its purpose of serving the University to its utmost capacity. Lily Maidenbaum, secretary, wrote letters and more letters to famous people and agencies. Treasurer, Eileen King, deserves orchids for managing the budget so beautifully. Beth Holcombe, social chairman, made the guest speakers feel at home by taking charge of luncheons and receptions. Lois Nichols was assigned to the legal details of contracts, while Barbara Jeschke, publicity chairman, kept the ball rolling after the contract had been signed. In closing, the committee extends its appreciation to Miss Lois Raymond, its helpful adviser.

MUSIC STUDY CLUB

“ATHING of beauty is a joy forever,” and so the appreciation and enjoyment of music, with its charm of the ages, is the aim of the Music Study Club, which has been a campus institution for eleven years.

Its selective membership is composed of girls who have either shown an outstanding ability in some field of musical endeavor, or who have a deep appreciation of music and want to aid in the purpose of bringing good music to the campus. The Club emphasizes the fact that one need not give musical performances to apply for membership, but need only exhibit an interest in music and its artists.

This year, the programs have proven especially entertaining and instructional. The plan was centered around the music of various countries. Talks and musical selections were given for English, French, Russian, German, Italian, and American Music. Among the special guest artists appearing on the programs this year, were individual soloists from the Men's Glee Club.

Each year the Music Study Club sponsors one of the artists who appear on the University Concert Series. This year the Club was proud to present Carol Glenn, outstanding young violinist. The Club also sponsored Lamar Crowson, 18-year old Oregon pianist, in a recital given in September; the North Carolina Symphony, featuring Egon Petri, in February; and a spring recital of campus student talent.

The Music Study Club is especially representative among organizations of the Woman's College of the aims of a liberal arts college. At a time when men are unable to give emphasis in their courses to music and art, it falls to the women to carry over these traditions into a future peacetime world, when the liberal arts schools may again take their place. For this reason, the Music Study Club hopes to encourage an interest among the women in things musical even greater than that found in peace time.

The organization has had excellent leadership, and that, together with the unlimited enthusiasm of its individual members, has accounted for its great success. The officers for the Music Study Club for 1943-44 were: Dora K. Zinner, president; Bessie Cox, vice president; Helen Haering, recording secretary; Margaret Hostetter, corresponding secretary; Helen Barnhardt, social chairman; with Miss Evelyn Barnes and Mrs. J. Foster Barnes, advisers.

THE NATIONAL honorary German fraternity, Delta Phi Alpha attempts to recognize excellence in German and thus give students encouragement and incentive for higher scholarship. It aims to foster the study of the German language and literature and the other cultural elements of German civilization.

Members of the society must have maintained a "B" average or more for a two year period of German study, and have good class standing.

During the past year there has been an average of one meeting a month. In November 18 new members were initiated. Other meetings were featured by cultural and social entertainment. The officers were Miss Leonor Wrench, president, and Mr. Arthur Gardner, secretary-treasurer. After mid-term in January, Mr. Burton Korelitz was chosen president and Miss Dorothy Wellnitz, vice president. The present adviser of the local chapter is Dr. Clement Vollmer of the German Department.

THETA ALPHA PHI

UNDER the excellent guiding hand of president Joe Gudstadt, the Alpha Chapter of Theta Alpha Phi is nearing the end of its eighteenth year on the campus of Duke University. The other officers of the club are Johnny Alexander, treasurer, and Betty Jones, secretary. This year marks the twenty-fifth anniversary of the national organization, which began in the middle-west, its first chapter being at the University of Chicago in 1919.

In the past, Theta Alpha Phi has been considered a relatively inactive organization. However, its members feel that their active participation in various forms of dramatic art compensates for this seeming inactivity. Johnny Alexander, Helen Kindler, and Al Robertson are only a few of the better known of its talented members.

Eligibility may be obtained through activities connected with Duke Players, Hoof and Horn, operettas, or any other dramatic productions on campus. A candidate must have played two major roles or four minor roles. He may also earn membership by technical work.

Y.M.C.A. CABINET

BINDING NAVY, Marine and Civilian students together to form a group conscious of Duke not as a military camp but as a University which they could call their alma mater was the aim of the Y.M.C.A. this year. Choice of officers and cabinet members maintained balance from each group—the outcome proved this to be a good theory. By providing a wholesome religious atmosphere, the Y helped relieve some of the strains arising from students working on a military basis.

New emphasis was placed on certain aspects of the work without sacrificing any of the main activities of the "Y" in past years. As in the past a large number of students worked at the Edgemont Community Center, needy section of Durham, directing recreational activities. Able leadership and interest among new students made possible an expansion of the Boys' Clubs in the city grammar schools. The highlight of this work was the attendance of three hundred boys at a football game and show on the campus as a special treat of Thanksgiving.

One of the chief campus problems was that of recreation, and the "Y" partly solved this by opening a recreational room to provide entertainment throughout the week. Of this activity, one interesting phase was the popular weekly Symphony Hour. The Sadie Hawkins Ball, the first informal dance of the year, and the choosing of Miss Sadie Hawkins by a race in the traditional cartoon manner, added much to a very successful dance. The Christmas Party and several retreats added more to the social program. Religious Emphasis Week with Reverend "Scotty" Cowan proved to be one of the most successful in years, due to a much closer cooperation of all campus organizations. Thus the Cabinet met the problem of student wartime activities both of service men and civilians by building a program aimed at Christian ideals with social service and recreational functions.

In November a new group of freshmen arrived; and they, too, were interested in forming a club. Their activity was very important especially in downtown "Y" work. The fruits of these two clubs are already being reaped in that a number of capable men have become interested in the work of the senior "Y." The continued activities of the Duke Y.M.C.A. is very definitely dependent upon clubs such as these and their success has assured an able and enthusiastic leadership for the coming year.

Much credit should be given to the work of President John Powell, whose constant work has made "Be a 'Y' Man," a reality. Recognition should also be given Bill Brinkley who started the Freshmen Clubs, and to Fred Doty.

COGS, the war organization of the coeds, stands not only for the real name College Organization (for) General Service, but is also significant of the college woman's place in the "all-out-for-victory" campaign. COGS was organized last year by Barbara Jarden, senior, and Miss Mary Grace Wilson. The purpose of the organization is to be of service in all war work and organizations, and to be on call for all activity in which college women can be of service. Every coed is a member of COGS. The aim of the organization is to encourage each student to feel it her responsibility to do something in the war effort. The purpose of the COGS "Hub" Committee, consisting of 41 representatives this year from the dormitories and town girl students, is to serve as a medium through which the war organizations and students are brought together and to act as a recruiting group on the campus.

COGS has been carrying on its program this year led by Dottie Chorpeneing, chairman; Barbara Jeschke, vice chairman; Merthel Greenwell, secretary; Barbara Stout, treasurer; Joyce Thresher, publicity director; Weeks Kirkmyer, historian; and COGS' enthusiastic sponsor, Miss Mary Grace Wilson. All types of war work have been undertaken by the COGS, including Red Cross bandage rolling, assisting in the Alumni Office, Red Cross knitting, entertainment for the service men, community welfare work sponsored through the "Y", nationwide drives including community war fund and salvage of old clothing, work as Nurses' Aides, and helping such local organizations as the Tuberculosis Association, and the Office of Civilian Defense here in Durham. This year, COGS has featured a Stamp Booth and a weekly Stationery Night in the Union.

COGS is a voluntary proposition. A girl receives a COGS key if she completes a required number of hours in a semester. For the first semester of this year, the required number was set at 55. In addition, there has been featured in the Chronicle a "COG of the Month," the girl having the most number of hours in at least three phases of COGS work.

Perhaps there will be a "March of the COGS" across the country, since the organization is spreading to other college campuses. Letters about the set-up of the organization were sent to many colleges this year. At least, Duke coeds who cannot, while in school, drive a jeep, or run a riveting machine in a war plant, know that they have been doing their part to obtain an early victory for the Allies!

Y.W.C.A. CABINET

SERVICE is the by-word of the Y.W.C.A. and this year the Y.W.C.A. Cabinet, led by the capable and enthusiastic Marybelle Adams, president, has done more for the college and the community than ever before. Miss Agnes Highsmith, affectionately called "Pete," took Miss Farrar Babcock's place as adviser for the "Y" and has brought in many new ideas from her work on other campuses.

Freshman week saw the "Y" girls greeting the newcomers as they arrived from all parts of the country on trains, buses, and automobiles. Anne Lineberger and her Social Committee filled their spare moments with teas, parties, and picnics. Discussion groups were soon organized by Betty Long for the freshmen to meet with the faculty members to talk about their interests and problems.

Membership in the "Y" swelled during the successful drive directed by Margie Stark, the vice president. The desire to serve, found many girls anxious to work at the nursery school, spastic clinic, Wright's Refuge, Duke Hospital, and Girl Scouts. Kay Gilliam, Chairman of the Social Service Committee, kept up their early interest, as did B. J. Mayhew, head of the Edgemont Community Center Committee. The girls working on their committees found a great deal of satisfaction in the much needed services they were performing.

Led by Nell Rees, the Worship Committee held a very impressive vesper service at twilight on the auditorium steps the first September Sunday that all were back. Discussion groups and other vesper services planned by Nell and her committee followed during the year.

Student-Faculty relations took on greater importance this year as Ginny Totman and her committee, working with six faculty members, planned parties and discussion groups to acquaint the students with the faculty in more informal settings.

Bobby Luessenhop, Program Committee head, Julia Ramsberg, Publicity Chairman, and Anne Hillman, W.S.G.A. representative, served admirably and helped to co-ordinate the activities of the "Y."

The activities were many, membership large, but the "Y" this year held its varied activities into one unit of service. Under the direction of the committee heads, each girl performed tasks of service to the community as well as to the college—a work for which they should be commended.

Geneva Eldridge kept the "Y" in contact with all the "Y" conferences in the country and helped us to realize that the Duke "Y" is a part of a world-wide organization. The work the "Y" has accomplished extends much farther than the Duke campus and Durham, but the Duke "Y" has played well in its small role.

WORKING in cooperation with the Y.W.C.A. is the Sophomore "Y" Commission, composed of approximately sixty-five enthusiastic volunteer members. Under the industrious supervision of "Pete" Highsmith and Nina Musselman, the commission carried on a wide range of activities this year planned to make the "Y" Commission a greater asset to campus life.

The main project for the year concerned social affairs in the Ark. By a series of Sunday evening parties, the Ark was presented to students as a place in which they could have fun on Sunday evenings after the Sing. Two of the best parties were at Halloween and Christmas, when everyone really entered into the spirit of the day. A Valentine's Day dance was sponsored for the Sophomore class.

Effort was made by members of the "Y" Commission, and also by members of Sandals, to keep the Ark open as much as possible. Due to the crowded conditions in Durham, the Ark has filled a need for recreation which the students have felt since the war. Dances were planned not only to increase recreational activities, but to further inter-campus social relations. In March, a series of three tea dances

COMPLETE reorganization of the former Freshman and Sophomore "Y" Councils was necessary in order to adjust them to the Navy program. Feeling a need to unify civilian freshmen who seemed to be lost in the multitude of sailors and marines, the first Freshman Club was organized in July for all the civilian freshmen.

A large percentage of the civilians joined. The officers led the group in planning several cabin parties and dances in the Union Ballroom and the Ark. In the absence of any class organization, the Club was the only freshman organization on campus, and therefore, the only means through which a unified freshman opinion could be expressed or through which freshman social activities could be stimulated.

The club played a very important part in orientating the group into the traditions of the school, as well as giving them a feeling that Duke was their home, to be loved and honored. One of the first important activities of the club was to participate in the Freshman Week program, assisting in the direction and registration of the November freshmen. Later, another club was organized for the November group. This new club was even more successful than the first.

was given for the boys who had just arrived, in an effort to help them become better acquainted with the coeds.

Great interest was taken by members in the annual Religious Emphasis Week. The commission sponsored a tea and a luncheon for the guest speaker of the week. In addition to this, they took charge of the final assembly in the auditorium during that week. In cooperation with the Y.W.C.A., the commission helped put on the "Y" Fair.

Another project which was introduced this year was a series of talks by foreign students on campus, given at the weekly meeting of the commission. In this way many interesting people were presented, and new ideas were brought to the attention of the members. Pertinent questions were introduced by these speakers, and often the meetings ended in lively discussions on post-war problems.

With the coming of new men at the opening of the March semester, the Commission assisted in the Ark to help the newcomers become acquainted with Duke social life. As a vigorous service organization on the East Campus, the Y.W.C.A. Commission has fully justified itself this year.

Both clubs participated in a number of service activities, but the more important functions were to assist directly in "Y" work and to develop future Y.M.C.A. leaders. Almost every member worked in the downtown boy's work, Edgemont Community Center, or assisted in supervising the "Y" Recreation Room on campus. Another work closely allied with these projects was the campus service committee which worked in the Duke Hospital, with the Lost and Found, and in other places of need on the campus, as at Christmas time.

As proof of success in developing leaders in a time of need, the clubs provided a number of the officers and cabinet members for the 1944-45 "Y" and made it possible for campus Y.M.C.A. work to be continued for another year.

As a campus service unit and as a stimulus toward making the civilian freshmen feel that they are an integral part of college life, the Freshmen Clubs performed an important function effectively and unobtrusively. It has served as a training ground for future "Y" leaders and it has provided an organized outlet for freshman talents. The club has its own leadership, but it is supervised by a member of the "Y" Cabinet, Bill Brinkley.

IN JULY, the Men's Glee Club started the year with a severe hardship. Because a large part of the more experienced upperclassmen were taken out of college by the armed forces, the Club was composed mainly of relatively inexperienced underclassmen. J. Foster Barnes, capable director of the Club for seventeen years, managed to continue the high standards set by the boys in years before, at a time when most other glee clubs had already disbanded.

In order to appeal to everyone's musical taste, the Glee Club includes in its extensive repertoire sacred and secular selections and negro spirituals, varied with its excellent solo talent. With such a widely appealing program, they sang at Queen's College in Charlotte, North Carolina in the fall, and went to Sweet Briar during the winter, giving a joint concert with the Sweet Briar Glee Club. The climax of the season was the trip to New York in January to sing over the C.B.S. network. This trip carried on the precedent set by eight annual, consecutive broadcasts from New York. Because of their excellent work, the Club was immediately extended an invitation for a return appearance. Whether or not the club is able to make this trip in the increasingly strict war-time conditions

INAUGURATING a series of Sunday evening entertainments for soldiers in the form of community sings at Camp Butner, the Women's Glee Club, under the direction of Mrs. J. Foster Barnes, completed another year as one of the largest organizations on the campus.

A hundred singers were chosen from the Glee Club for membership in the University Chapel Choir, which is composed of carefully picked voices from both the Men's and Women's Glee Clubs, directed by J. Foster Barnes. One of the purposes of the Women's Glee Club is to serve as a training ground that can gradually send singers into the Chapel Choir.

In addition to the regular Sunday morning Chapel services, the Choir gave its annual presentation of Handel's Messiah at Christmas and the Brahms Requiem at Easter. The Choir also sang the music for the annual Christmas pageant. Monthly socials after choir practice were started this year with games, refreshments, and dancing in the Union Ballroom.

The annual Glee Club Dance, presented in honor of the new members of the Women's Glee Club, was given November 6 in cooperation with the Men's Glee Club. A women's chorus of thirty singers, intensively trained for concert is a question; but the Club is still highly honored by the invitation.

Plans for the spring include concerts at Randolph Macon Woman's College and at the State Teacher's College in Farmville, Virginia, where the Club will give Brahms' Requiem with the Woman's Glee Club of that college.

The Men's Glee Club, as a part of the Duke University Chapel Choir, in cooperation with the Woman's Glee Club of the University, presented the unforgettable Messiah in the Chapel at Christmas time.

The social event of the year for the two clubs was a joint dance given in honor of the new members.

There are approximately seventy-five men in the Glee Club "squad," which is open to all who can sing. Out of this "squad" are picked the best readers and singers for the Chapel Choir. From this group, the men with the greatest proficiency are carefully picked to go on the trips. Thus, even with the exigencies of war, the Men's Glee Club maintains the high standards which it has set in previous years.

The campus can well be proud of the University Glee Club which has so well served and represented the school.

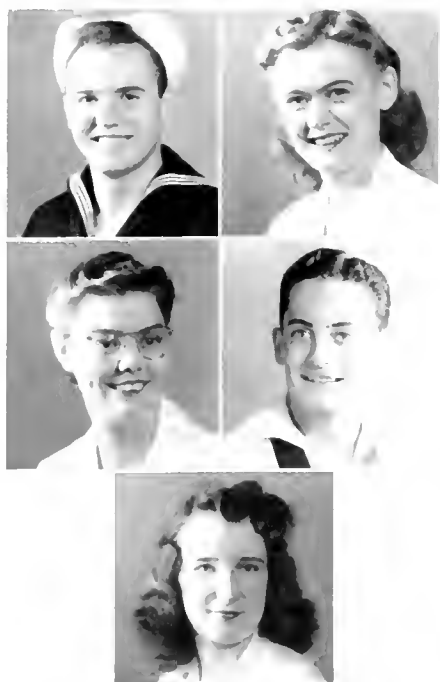

work, was carefully selected from the Women's Glee Club. This special group gave a number of concerts at the USO centers in Durham and assisted at various functions on campus.

Scrolls of merit for service were awarded to several members of the club at the end of the year for their work in the Glee Club. These plaques, which were given last year for the first time, will be presented annually to those Glee Club members who have rendered outstanding service to the organization.

Under the leadership of these officers, the Women's Glee Club composes one of the largest memberships of any of the organizations on campus, offering opportunity for all those with interest and ability to join.

Officers of the Women's Glee Club this year were Shirley Spencer, president; Novella Murray, vice president; Frances Fulk, secretary; Betty Jane Seawell, treasurer; Judith Isley, librarian; Marjorie Stark, Choir secretary; Nancy Sour, assistant Glee Club secretary; and Bessie Cox, accompanist. Because of the graduation of three seniors in January, Barbara Axton, Betty Jones, and Velma Jane Ritchey were chosen secretary, business manager, and accompanist respectively.

Janice Bell, as Claudia, pleads with her husband Curtiss Paul in a poignant scene from "Claudia," but her wiles still leave him doubtful.

THE OLD SAYING, "The show must go on," might well have been the motto of Duke Players this year. Limitations resulting from the war conditions, and the constant changes in membership as a result of the V-12 program have given rise to new and unusual problems. It was only possible to produce three plays this year, instead of the usual four, but these three, all Broadway hits, were highlights in the entertainment program of the campus.

Duke Players is one of the most versatile organizations on the campus. It offers opportunities for the expression of numerous talents. The work may be thought of as being divided into three interdependent phases. The stage crew is of prime importance, but is often overlooked when the bouquets are being handed out. The backstage committees work hard and long in order to prepare the way for a smooth-running production. Every set used by Duke Players is completely designed and constructed by members of the organization. After construction, the sets must be painted and then swung into position on stage, so that they can be changed rapidly between acts. All this is hard work, but it furnishes much enjoyment and pleasant memories for those who participate.

Also essential to production are properties, make-up, costumes, and lighting. The properties committee must see that there is a place for everything, and everything is in that place when the opening night arrives—which is a difficult undertaking. The make-up and costume committees work hand in hand in an effort to transform the actors into the characters of the play. This is a fascinating job. The skill of stage make-up can be developed only by patience and practice. Experienced members of the committee conduct regular classes in which they instruct interested newcomers to the field.

Very few people realize the importance of lights in creating the desired effect. The interplay of foots, spots, borders, and baby spots is a complicated affair, and the electrician does a commendable job.

The difficult task of transforming average college students into actors and actresses in a few short weeks is successfully performed by A. T. West. "Pop," as he is called by all those who have worked with him, maintains a pleasant, friendly relationship with the students under his direction. Once the cast has been selected, rehearsals begin. Although they are long and tedious, everyone enjoys them and regrets to see the last one come to an end.

DUKE PLAYERS

The reaction of the audience is the best test of the merits of the productions. This year the Players opened a very successful season with the presentation of "Claudia," which set a high standard for the plays that followed, namely: "The Ninth Guest" and "The Little Foxes," in addition to breaking all time box-office records that the Players had established in years gone by. "Claudia" brought down the house with its excellent characterization of the young couple by Curtiss Paul and Janice Bell— not to forget the work of "Mother" Helen Kindler. For chills and thrills, "The Ninth Guest" was unapproachable, with Rog Tuttle, being but one of the murdered and Snowy Ethridge playing a spine-chilling dramatic scene before she goes to her death. Following comedy and melodrama, came drama in the form of the Broadway stage hit, "The Little Foxes." So ended a well-rounded, well-attended season.

Many potential Thespians gained valuable experience by taking part in the Little Theatre one-act plays which were presented on several occasions following the business meetings of the organization.

The third component group in Duke Players is the business staff. The plays must be financial as well as dramatic successes. The executive committee, composed of the club's officers, formulates production policy, and the business staff as a whole assumes responsibility for all transactions concerning the organization. The staff is divided into committees. The publicity committee's assignment is to spread news about Duke Players on the campus and in the Durham community. They employ students with artistic ability, originality, and creative ideas to prepare and distribute posters, news stories, handbills, previews, and reviews.

To the Box-office staff goes the detailed business of arranging seating and selling tickets. On the nights of production, the house committee functions. The usherettes, house managers, and doormen all perform essential duties.

So the picture is complete: an organized group of students with varied talents, but having one common interest. In providing entertainment for the campus, the members of Duke Players work hard, but they also have a lot of fun, which they will never forget. As old members say farewell, new ones arrive to take their place, and so the show goes on.

The officers for 1943-44 were: President, Joe Gutstadt; Vice President, Kay Beattie; Secretary, Marilynn Wasson; Treasurer, and Business Manager, Stuart Wintner; Coed Business Manager, Eunice Minter; Points Chairman, Virginia Ward; Member-at-Large, Peggy Pierce.

Mother, Julia, Claudia, and David hold a family discussion. Mother and daughter, brother and sister, husband and wife— each view is well represented by the outspoken characters, who here look like veritable figures from the classic pen of James Thurber.

HOOF AND HORN

IT WAS BACK in the fall of 1936 that a couple of Irishmen named Callahan and Mackie were struck with the idea of staging The South's first full length college musical revue. This show was to be similar to those musicals produced by the traditionally famous Princeton Triangle and Harvard Hasty Pudding Clubs. Call boards were posted, meetings were held, and the talent arrived from East and West Campuses. Try-outs were held in the West Union ballroom, and actual rehearsals were held in the Southgate gymnasium. After several postponements, the first annual Hoof and Horn musical show, "The Devil Grins," was finally scheduled for a presentation in Page Auditorium. Sadly enough, The Devil seems to have grinned a bit too soon, for the great team of Callahan and Mackie had neglected to write a script for their show. And so the end of the school year 1936-7 saw the end of the first Hoof and Horn production.

Then came the winter of 1941, and Bob Keller began to reorganize the Club. This time the script came through, all was planned far in advance, and things began to roll. Monetary backing was given by the Men's Pan-Hellenic Council, and the show was a distinct success. This was followed the next year by "The Laugh's the Thing," which showed even greater improvement.

But, dogged by the continual bad luck which has been its lot, the dazzling Hoof and Horn embarrassed its promoters again in 1942. As usual, plans were laid, songs written, and script manufactured. But this time there were just too many heads in the stew. Two scripts were dashed off, and then came the rift between the two camps. The whole thing fell through, and things again looked dark for the Hoof and Horners.

Now comes the year of 1943, with its sailors and Marines and a new atmosphere entirely. In spite of obstacles, however, the Hoof and Horn came back—with a bang! Plans were laid early, the chorus was well-rehearsed, and the show was extremely well handled by enthusiastic one man producer, Al Robertson. Robertson, who has been a perennial Duke favorite for his tap-dancing, wrote the script single-handed, and had charge of directing the dance routines. Following Al, was Don Buckley who took one of the male leads, and wrote thirteen songs for the score, among the most popular of which was "Suzy," which was gustily rendered by Snow Ethridge and Bob Stepback. Other male leads were taken by Robertson and dancing "Teeny" Roberts, who performed in the Broadway musical, "Best Foot Forward." The female leads were taken by Merthel Greenwell, Peg Fisher, Snow Ethridge and Bev Snyder.

Dud McCaskill and Bev Snyder laugh as they pause in their rehearsal of Hoof and Horn show's conga number.

Robertson, Fisher, Greenwell, and Buckley smile amid applause at the Hoof and Horn show in which they played the leads.

HOOBY AND ROSS

The chorus is really on its toes as Al Robertson puts them through their paces.

Clarence Smith, remembered for his performance in last year's Otto Harback show "Hayfoot, Strawfoot," introduced several of Buckley's songs, with musical arrangements by Al Bell, formerly with Jimmy Lunceford and Vaughn Munrow, and Nick Cruger, who served in the same capacity with Sonny Dunham and Jimmy Dorsey.

The story of "Stand By" centered around a Service Center. In this way, Robertson was able to take advantage of the many uniforms on campus. Marines, sailors, and ROTC, they were all represented. In the colorful opening scene, brightly-dressed girls of the chorus, picked from the Men's and Women's Glee Clubs, sang the show's theme "Stand By," as they represented a crowded U.S.O.

After the scene, were introduced the main figures of the show—Merthel Greenwell whose heart Don Buckley is trying to win, and Peg Fisher and Al Robertson, who are forever having trouble—at least, Robertson is. Peg, who has never been seen in a dancing part at Duke before, captivated her audience by her vivacity, and the other three were equally capable in their roles, although it seemed to some that they would surely be more fluttered than Buckley in making love to such a lovely girl as Merthel.

We suspect that the best part of the production for many of the audience was the dancing chorus. Especially gay was their South American number in which Dudley MacCaskill, Yvonne Stewart, and Bev Snyder starred.

But credit goes not only to the leads and the chorus. The show could never have been produced without the Duke University Glee Club under the direction of Mr. Barnes, or the help of pianist Norman Schnell. The invaluable work on the musical score was done by Don Buckley, Tom Wolff, Norm Schnell, and Ed Polokoff. Then there were the innumerable committees on the business end that must gather properties, edit the playbill, paint scenery, sell tickets, manage floodlights, and spotlights, and other technicalities too numerous to mention. Business Manager for the whole production was cigar-smoking, fast-talking Howard Terry, and Advertising Manager was Joe Waters.

After long weeks of preparation then, the great night came, the lights went up, and "Stand By" was ready to roll. All too soon it was over, and a tired but jubilant cast had now only to receive well earned congratulations.

THE FRESHMAN Advisory Council is an honorary group, consisting of about thirty responsible upperclassmen who are chosen on the basis of ability, leadership, character, and interest. The status of the Council is not a disciplinary one; rather, it is based on friendliness, interest and loyalty. The responsibilities and duties of the advisers are to aid the freshmen in adjusting themselves to college life in all its aspects. They help the freshmen acquire good study habits, they help them to choose their extracurricular activities wisely and they do all in their power to see that each and every new Duke coed soon becomes in every way a useful campus citizen. The counselors guide, advise, and encourage the new girls in the ways of Duke coeds. Under the supervision of Mrs. Elizabeth Anderson Persons, who is Dean of Freshman Women, and in cooperation with the Freshman Office, this organization works for a permanent development of character and personality, for a true sense of values and discipline, and for a spirit of independence that should continue with the student during her entire life.

The Freshman Advisers, along with upperclassmen from the other organizations of the Wo-FACING its first war-time threat, the Freshman Advisory Council became even more loaded down with activities, as masses of freshmen kept arriving at various odd times during the year. The war caused the Advisory year to be split into two semesters with a complete reorganization in November.

Although many groups died by the wayside, the Council continued its functions, reaching out to aid in orienting and advising the new freshmen and transfers arriving each semester.

The purpose of this organization has been to make available to the freshmen the knowledge and experience of select upperclassmen; so that this year's entrance into war-time Duke might be made easier and the enjoyments fuller. The Freshman Advisory Council attempts to assist the freshman in the difficult transition from secondary school to higher college education, to give accurate information concerning any phase of Duke life, to help him acquire better study and play habits, and to help develop a full character with correct attitudes that will be useful in later years.

Innovations for war-time expediency include freshman girl open houses, freshman evening man's College, return to the campus a week early in order to meet and welcome the new arrivals. The Council helps create an atmosphere of friendliness which gives freshmen a sense of belonging to this new life in which they will take part for the following four years. Freshman Week gives the newcomers an opportunity to become acquainted with some of the upperclassmen and to become familiar with their surroundings. During this week, rules and regulations are also explained to them, and regular placement tests are given to them; so the freshmen are more or less settled by the time the regular school year begins.

The Freshman Advisory Council plays an important part on the campus. First of all, it is a student organization and as such, contacts the freshmen directly on a basis of equality and understanding. The advisers are best able to lead these newcomers because, having been freshmen themselves, they are strengthened by their own experiences and equipped with tried methods. This organization is one of the instruments through which girls passing from high school into college become women worthy of a college community, then of their own community and their nation.

dances, a new Council office open to freshmen for entertainment purposes, a banquet for advisers to promote good will and unity within the organization, and a blind date system launched in combination with East Campus houses. In addition, weekly contacts are usually made by the advisers with each of his five or six advisee freshmen.

As its climatic social event of the year, the F.A.C. planned and successfully staged an open campus dance with members admitted free as a reward for hard work during the semester. A freshman queen, Miss Charlotte Crane, was elected by the student body and was crowned at the dance. It is hoped that this dance will become an Annual Ball presented each winter by the Freshman Advisory Council.

The Council of one hundred members met every week to discuss further plans. These advisers were divided into five groups, each of which was led by a house captain, who, in turn, was responsible to the vice presidents and the president.

Whatever future Duke years may bring, the Freshman Advisory Council will maintain its rightful position as one of Duke's most-needed organizations.

PUBLICATIONS BOARD

THE PUBLICATIONS Board of Duke University has been invested with more responsibility during the past year than at any time during its existence. This year, several elections of importance have been held as a result of men leaving for active service with the armed forces and through mid-term graduation. The Publications Board, consisting partly of faculty members and partly of students, elected at the same time that Student Government members are chosen, has endeavored to pick the most capable people for the most responsible positions.

One of the more important decisions enacted by the Board last year was the passage of a proposal that the heretofore campus humor magazine, the Duke 'n' Duchess, be combined with the literary monthly, the Archive, under the latter's name into one monthly magazine devoted both to humor and literary effort. This plan went into effect at the start of the 1943 academic year and has met with campus approval.

The Board also consented to the initiation of two new publications. One of these was the DukEngineer, the Engineering student body's monthly magazine; the other, the Dolphin. For the DukEngineer, the Board established and delegated powers of election to the Engineering Publications Advisory Committee, which group would hold and supervise elections for the DukEngineer. The latter publication is put out by the Duke Naval Reserve Officer's Training Corps and is written by members of the ROTC.

Investigation of the financial stability of the different campus publications is another function of the Board. Proposals were made as to how all the publications could represent both campuses, rather than just the West Campus.

The Board consists of the five members of the faculty, alumni committees, six men, and four women elected by the undergraduate student body, and the editors and business managers of the various publications who serve in an advisory but non-voting capacity. Charles E. Ward serves as chairman of the Board and Mary Bankhardt as secretary. Other faculty members are C. B. Markham, Charles E. Jordan, Henry R. Dwire, and Dean W. H. Wannamaker.

The student representatives on the Board this year have been M Rountree, Allen Grayson, Dave Fick, Max Ferree, Joe DiMona, John Carr, Jackie Lewis, Carolyn King, Helen Kindler, Mary Bankhardt.

Upon the departure of naval trainees, DiMona, Fick, and Ferree, new representatives were elected to the Board at midterm elections. These representatives are Hartsell Cash, Charles Markham, and Raymond Smith.

Standing: Rountree, DiMona, Wade, Kindler, Fick.
Seated: Markham, Jordan, Bankhardt, Ward, Lewis, Dwire, Wannamaker.

PUBLICATIONS IN TIME OF WAR

DUE TO WAR and its exigencies, the main sources of expressing student opinion—publications—have been fighting off a severe crisis. Editorships have changed a half dozen times in as many months, the rate of publication has decreased, two magazines have combined, and other drastic changes have taken place since the start of the war. Several times, the idea of suspending all publications until the end of the war has come up. Each time, that defeatist attitude has been staved off by editors, managers and staffs who carried the burden of the work so that this integral part of a liberal arts college might remain.

There are, at present, three traditional publications on the Duke campus—the Chronicle, a weekly newspaper, the CHANTICLEER, the annual yearbook, and the Archive, a monthly magazine. The Chronicle is continuing to carry out its chief duty—to disseminate campus news and opinion in an interesting yet informative manner. The CHANTICLEER continues its policy of giving a summary of the year's campus events in writing and pictures. The Archive, which combined with the traditional Duke 'n' Duchess, carries forth the humor of the latter publication and presents the finest in literary effort. In addition, the engineers have their own publication and the Naval ROTC has its magazine. Yet all campus publications have been faced with one obstacle after another. There have been manpower shortages, paper shortages, news shortages. The January issue of the Archive came out in February. Still it came out. The Chronicle has received as many, if not more, letters to the editor as in the past. The CHANTICLEER, for the first time, will have a mailing list that may exceed the number of students on campus.

It is indeed a tribute to all those who have contributed so much of their time and effort in order to win the "battle for survival." The editors and business managers have carried many more difficulties than the supervision of assistants, and they have found it necessary to forego due compensation for their work, due to Navy restrictions. Their staffs have been sharply reduced, and their work has been trebled, yet their respective publications have been meeting the fine traditions set by publications of yesteryear. At no time has there been a let-down.

For the first time in the history of Duke, a woman, Helen Wade, has been elected editor-in-chief of the CHANTICLEER. While this normally would not have happened in peacetime, this is offset by the fine work she has done in editing and supervising work. A co-ed also, Mary Bankhardt, is business manager of the yearbook. While Publications Row has been "feminized" to some degree there is still the will to carry on all publications at all costs.

The future of Publications Row at Duke is uncertain. The "battle for survival" has not been won. The only road to a victory is to continue honest attempts to elect the most capable people into the most responsible positions. The abolition of fraternity "politics," no discrimination against the coed "touch," and the exclusion of candidates who desire personal benefit more than the quality of publications, will keep Duke publications functioning in spite of wartime restrictions. May the Publications Board, which elects the editors and business managers, ever keep this in mind.

It is a tribute to the American way of life that a liberal arts college can not only survive during war time but can continue the extra-curricular functions of college life—a life in which publications are so important. In no other country has this academic freedom been possible. It is our proud hope that Duke publications can not only survive now, but can show an efficiency and quality that the Publications Row of a peacetime world can look back upon and say: "This was their best effort, and it is good."

ARCHIVE

This year, after merging with the Duke 'n' Duchess, Duke's former humor magazine, the Archive got a new and complete "face lifting." Gone was the once stultic and unappreciated strict literary body of the old Archive. In its place was grafted fresh, invigorating humor; "eye catching" pictures, and many story illustrations. The magazine, as a result of these radical changes, took on a well-rounded and balanced appearance. It was, for the first time in many years, applauded by the general student body, and its appearance was eagerly awaited by all.

The year's contents included every type of material from Cliff Crawford's surrealistic "stream of consciousness" story to a pictorial lay-out of Durham's food situation. There were, of course, many features that came between these two extremes. Dormitory walls were blistered by the Duchess of the Month pictures, the photographic covers and the prize shot of the year; Dottie Groome in her bubble bath, which rated the February cover spot. Turning the pages of the issue you found stories written by the best talent on both the East and West campuses. "Filboid Glover," whose identity was a deep dark secret, contributed several fine contemporary and humorous articles, and even Professor Widgery's technique of taking a bath found a spot in the mag. Joe DiMona gave the readers an inside view of Publications Row, and Ned Martin introduced the world to "The Finger." Pictorial center spreads were dreamed up by the staff and added spice and color to the issues. The most popular of these was of the beauty queens in informal poses showing them as they are sans flowing dresses, make-up, and imposing settings.

The magazine was edited by Dave Fick and a competent staff made up mainly of girls from East. Although the staff was smaller than usual, it was well knit; it had an ingenious knack for discovering new talent, and it was a wealth of imagination and clever ideas of some originality. Snowy Etheridge led the girls as coed editor, and Didi Duphey, fresh out of art school, ably assisted in her role of art editor. Peggy Bacon, Missy Johnson, Dee Gentner and others formed the nucleus of female assistants to the editor. Bud Peterson held down the responsible position of associate editor with Ned Martin, Frank Bliss, and others helping to provide assigned material. Ray Lopez, Austin Knight, and Sandy Tecklin did the art work.

Without the business staff, the magazine could not have enjoyed its tremendous success. Hartsell Cash, business manager, deserves much credit for the fine job that he and his staff turned in. Ads this year showed an increase over the usual amount, and from them came the financial backing that made the colorful magazine possible. Aiding Cash were Audrey Hance, coed business manager; Dottie Groome, advertising manager; Bob Cowin, Mary Nelson Freels, Peggy Heim, Newt Angier, and Ann Harrell.

The 1944 Archive, which started its fifty-eighth year of continuous publication, is headed for bigger and better issues, and will remain alive to act as an outlet for student literary and humorous efforts.

CHRONICLE

EDITORIAL STAFF

In a dynamic year of change and challenge, the Chronicle once again made its appearance on the campus. In a matter of a few weeks, it had once again proven itself.

Mere remnants of the stellar 1942-43 staff returned to school this fall. Gone were Rae, and Hughes, and Baldwin, all past editors who served in the spring semester. To Duke returned only John Carr, who was set to finish up in November, Joe DiMona, and Charlie Markham.

The first few issues were uncertain, probing. Editor John Carr, a civilian senior, faced the problem of editing a newspaper for a naval group which appeared only half interested. Joe DiMona, an apprentice seaman, V-12, took which goes into the creation of a newspaper. In a very large sense, they were responsible for the regular publication of the newspaper.

Forced to make retrenchments technically, the Chronicle this year strove for a more striking, entertaining newspaper. More than ever before, the Chronicle was given over to the students. Their opinions and ideas dictated the scheme of the newspaper.

As ever before, the Chronicle once again assumed its time-honored position as overseer of the campus. Campus organizations were kept on the move by the watchful Chronicle. Others were sponsored, and nurtured by the newspaper.

The editorial page strove for complete representation of the campus. A fleet man from Iceland, Bud Peterson, wrote a regular column. Two civilians, sportsman turned-honest Art Jaffey, and Barney Brogan, SGA president, alternated writing a second. Bob Rickert, NROTC midshipman, wrote another. And Doreen Walker contributed a co-ed column.

On this page, too, the Letters to the Editor column blossomed forth as never before. The Chronicle was literally swamped with letters of all sorts; letters complaining about the dating situation, lack of discipline, the Union, lack of dances, Duke's Mixture, and, surprisingly, editorials.

Chronicle editors took this as a criterion of awakened student interest in the newspaper as well as in campus affairs. It was a healthy sign.

Gloomy predictions of last year that the Chronicle would be an East campus newspaper by Christmas did not come true. At year's end the Chronicle was still going strong on West campus, still happily portraying Duke history from male and female viewpoint.

Fick, DiMona, and Terry get a laugh out of Joe's "Letter to the Editor."

over in November and held the editor's position until February. Charlie Markham, civilian junior, then assumed the position.

For the Chronicle it was a trying year, but a happy one. The skeleton staff which took over the Chronicle in its darkest moment, and transformed it into a living, forceful campus newspaper could feel well rewarded at year's end at the grateful reception with which the students, new and old, had given it.

Much of the credit for the successful publication of the Chronicle must go to the huge and willing co-ed staff which twice a week traveled West under the capable leadership of co-ed editor Helen Kindler. The co-eds uncomplainingly took over all of the small, inglorious work

HOWARD TERRY, Business Manager

CHRONICLE BUSINESS STAFF

BEDLAM, CONFUSION, papers flying East and West—this is the business office on the night of the weekly issue of the Chronicle. Amidst this chaos, Business Manager Ray Smith stands secure in the knowledge that Associate Business Manager Joe Waters has the books balanced and that the paper is filled to overflowing with advertising “inches”—Well, almost. Beside him, works capable Coed Business Manager, Ruth Jolly, and Circulation Managers Gordon Clark and Bob Beaman.

But let's go back to the beginning of the year. Johnny Hartman started off with no assistance; consequently, there was poor circulation of the paper, and many copies of each issue were wasted. When he left for Midshipman's School in October, Howard Terry was elected new Business Manager. Terry and his cigar were a familiar picture on Publications Row; yet, in spite of his nonchalant ways, he was an excellent advertising man. Through the combined efforts of Terry and Circulation Manager Smith, the entire advertising and circulation departments were revised. Office Manager Art Gilbert did his part by keeping the books.

As in most of the publications, the experienced personnel has been decreased, thus putting the burden of the load on a few. Ruth Jolly should be commended for her work in getting a great increase in female workers on the business staff, for the depletion of the ranks of male workers made such a move extremely necessary. Thus, despite the boogy of war-time difficulties, the staff did its job well, with the traditional purpose of providing experience in business and leadership, and helping the university through the financial control of its newspaper. As we have implied above, the difficulties of this year were overcome by letting each member of the staff assume new and varied duties.

Many of the advertisers who had previously contributed much to the paper were so much affected by the war that the staff had to turn to other fields that were not so affected. In this way, the advertising staff was able to exceed the number of advertisements sold in other years by a considerable percentage. For this work, credit should be given to Ray Smith, Ruth Jolly, Betsy Rankin, and Nancy Donovan.

The weeks passed; advertising was sold; somehow, the ads ran over the requisite number of “inches” each week; the circulation staff labored over zones and addresses and distributed papers to students and astonished faculty who had not seen a paper outside their doors in many a day. DiMona distracted the women on the staff; but his efforts were in vain; for the women were gunning for Smith. And through all, the office underwent a hurricane of cleaning. Files saw the light of day for the first time in years. Dust that had so comfortably collected for months was disturbed ruthlessly. New gadgets were installed, and petty cash went for a new lampshade—pink, mind you—rather than cigars. The Revolution had come: the office was clean and assignments were posted early. At last, the last paper was distributed, the women left for summer vacation, and the rest of the staff went into hibernation with memories of a year filled with laughter, fun, work, midnight oil, and a good share of success.

CHANTICLEER EDITORIAL STAFF

A RADICAL change took place in the CHANTICLEER editorial office this year. No longer, could aspiring freshmen coeds travel from East to Publications Row in the hope of snagging a male there; for, in the office of the 1944 CHANTICLEER, men were few and far between.

There is the classic story of the lieutenant, a staff member from the "old days" who dropped into the office one afternoon, looked astounded, gasped: "This can't be the editorial office," turned, and fled.

Formidable as this array of female talent may have been to the stranger, it was of utmost importance to the production of a yearbook which had to meet an advanced schedule and cope with war-time shortages. Editor Henry Nicholson handled his female staff tactfully; and after Nicholson's departure in November, Coed Editor Helen Wade filled the vacated editorial chair, and Barbara Luessenhop was left with the organization of the woman's staff.

Deadlines appeared with terrifying regularity. A hectic staff drew layouts, assembled pictures, and worried over captions. "Zip" Thompson and Austin Knight continued to work on layouts, Nimble-fingered Bobi Perse, Peggy Klotz, Marty Nicholson, and Marie Christodoulou typed copy, while the plaint of Lucy Blue and Mary Ranger was heard as they wrote identifications: "How can there be so many people in this school that I don't know?" Ted Wolf, glorious in this whirl of feminine activity, was helping to assign tasks and working with the dummy. Photographer Marilyn McClure agitated between the dark-room and the office, while Bill Gillen calmly went his own way, impervious to interruptions. Unfortunately, Bob Johnson had to leave his photographer's job because of the pressure from academic work. Bob Johnson edited the sports section, assisted by Art Jaffey and Harry Beau-doin. Credit should also be given to George McCormick who left in November and to Chuck Myers who took his place.

At least the final deadline had been met. The last conference had been held with Gordon Brightman of Jahn & Ollier Engraving Company and Joe Hardison of Edwards & Broughton Company, and the last copy had been proof read. Now the staff sat back with a sigh and and the knowledge that they had done a difficult job to the best of their ability.

CHANTICLEER

BUSINESS STAFF

THE OLD adage that "a woman's place is in the home" was disproved this past year when Mary K. Bankhardt headed up the 1944 CHANTICLEER business staff followed by a bevy of beauties from East. To have a woman as business manager was unprecedented, but this is war! Mary B. and her staff started right in organizing and running the office with a woman's efficiency.

These girls came in and took over "publications row" like Grant took Richmond. . . . In a short time everything was running fine. The taking and filing of pictures of the new V-12 unit came very easily. While pictures were being taken, and the advertising campaign got under had a lot of good advice to give mixed in with a laugh or two. . . . Then there was Dud McCaskill . . . he sold his weight in ads . . . a magnificent salesman.

The Beauty Queens were chosen by the Naval Academy this year. Their choice was approved by all. . . . Banky managed to arrange a trip for all of them to the famed Academy one week-end.

And so on through the year we went—the whole staff helping to do the tedious clerical work and other less attractive jobs which are all a vital part of the process of publishing a top ranking college annual. . . . Their work was shortened by the omission of the "padded cover" campaign and by the introduction of new systems of subscription files. A few members of our staff who did excellent jobs in the office, also wearers of the skirt, are Pattie McGowan, Pat Hanson, Bev Protzmann, "Picture snapping momma" Merlyn McClure, Betty Jewel, and Macky Cassady . . . all of them faithful and co-operative.

Things ran smoothly. The collections were made from the V-12 unit. Bills were paid. Mr. Jordan was a great help in his counsel and support. . . . Spring came; the arrival and distribution of 2,750 books presented our last problem. Over twenty-five per cent of them had to be mailed to the homes of students all over the country, many of them not to be seen by their owners until they return from overseas. . . .

Finally the ledger was closed. . . . Another successful season for the CHANTICLEER Business Staff had come to a close with high hope that all will end as happily for next year's staff as for this.

From the Business Manager, the Coed Manager, and the Advertising Manager—thanks to all the staff and the student body.

way and these neophytes of the business world undertook the advertising salesmanship with great enthusiasm.

Under the leadership of Herb Horwitz, some of the women turning into high pressure salesmen were Nancy Lee Laws, Beth Holcombe, Mary Nelson Freels, Ann Fountain, Dodie Blennerhassett, Ruth Romaine, Carolyn King. . . . The CHANTICLEER outdid itself and sold the greatest number of ads in its history. For the first time in years, West bows to East.

We still had a few males in the office . . . Bill Gillen handled the organization work as only Gillen can do, and also managed to take a few pictures for the book. . . . Horwitz (Advertising Manager and Associate Manager), was still around putting his two cents in . . . he always

DUKEENGINEER

THE DukEngineer had its beginning some three years ago in the form of mimeographed material. In the spring of last year, a drive was started to establish a printed publication. The staff was quickly elected and recognition by the University Publications Board was approved. National advertising was solicited; subscriptions were obtained. The first printed issue was brought forth in July of that year.

The strictly technical side of engineering is done away with; in fact many articles do not deal with any kind of engineering whatsoever. From past issues have come articles on such varied subjects as Navy cruises, life in a radio station, views of a west campus columnist, a trip through a whiskey distillery, the story of Winston Churchill's bath in the White House, a

AL ROUNDTREE, Editor-in-Chief

The Cover designs for the DukEngineer have been especially outstanding. The only view of the famous Duke Chapel under construction was featured on the April issue. There followed views of sailors operating a huge electric generator; four shots of the Navy Seabees in action; a photograph of Duke women at war in the drawing rooms; and recently a scene of a Duke Engineer hard at work at his disheveled desk. In the March '44 magazine, the cover featured five shots depicting traditions at Duke, lightning experiments, graduation scene, bomber crew, and Duke women as draftsmen.

The earliest efforts of the engineering student body to establish this newest of publications is truly representative of them.

To these men and to the many students in our college, we offer sincere appreciation for the support, coöperation, and spirit you have shown in the founding of this DukEngineer.

short story of a monk, a coed's views on a man's dormitory, the adventures of clipper pilots, and the making of phonograph records.

Credit should go to the three men who organized the first printed issue of the DukEngineer: Richard Nelson, John Carr, and Al Roundtree. To the other engineers who have worked diligently on the editorial part of the book: Dick Doyle, John Imhoff, Dunham Seely, Bill Freeze, Heyward Marshall, Bill Becker—go our thanks. Kermit Lindeberg and Neal McGuire, serving in the capacities of Business Managers, deserve praise for the expert handling of the financial problems. The advertising campaigns have been ably conducted by Jack Reyle and the circulation men: Bill Dackis, and his staff, have come through with flying colors.

LIFE and LAUGHTER

S O C I A L L I F E

MEMORIES OF THE PAST, CONTACTS OF THE PRESENT, PLANS FOR THE FUTURE

When our graduation has come and gone, when we'll be on the steps of the train at Union Station looking down on the gang of friends we're leaving behind, we'll be remembering our Duke days with many a varied sentiment—some good, some bad. But there is one part of Duke that will come down to the station with us and that will always seem most important to us—something made up of all the fun and laughter we had with the kids down the hall, at the fraternity or sorority meetings, at the Goodie Shop.

Although war has brought changes to the fraternities, there is still a strong semblance of that pre-war feeling for brotherhood inaugurated by those fraternities.

Sororities still are an important part of life on East campus. The meetings, the pledges of loyalty that will last "through all eternity," sometimes the tears—all are associated with that part of college life not easily forgotten.

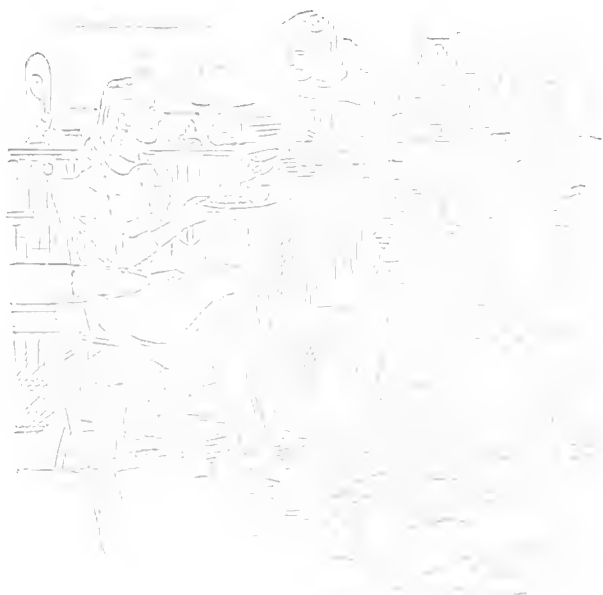

Then, of course, the dances, the cabin parties, the get-acquainted open houses—who will not remember all these things?—The time we set aside for forgetting Hitler, math problems, Tarawa. East has and always will be east, and west will be west, but yet the twain have met; and we've found that there is no feeling so grand as the good comradeship found in the midst of fun and laughter.

No one can deny that. And no one can deny that such friendships have been formed here at Duke.

So we appreciate all the time of planning of the social groups— not only because of the carefree memories that we shall always have, but also because of the forming of friendships that are deep inside of us and that we all know will last.

Memories of the past—memories of laughter and fun in our fraternities and sororities, parties, and dances. Contacts of the present—our everyday friends that we see and talk to. Plans for the future—hopes and ideals that we all want to see come true. All these are formed from our social life.

MEN'S PAN-HEL. COUNCIL

Third row: Lanahan, Bailey, Christie, Blanchard, Perrin, Wiggins, Keller, Zengol.

TO THIS YEAR'S Council fell the difficult task of coördinating Duke's eighteen fraternities which are existing under Navy regulations. Efforts were made to lower fraternity expenses and to guide fraternity activities so that the fraternity system might be prolonged on this campus during war time.

Plans for the post-war campus were formed, and all groups were encouraged to invest in war bonds in order to build reserves for the future and thus to insure the existence of every fraternity as long as possible.

To insure an equal opportunity to all fraternities in pledging men was a tremendous problem, since "open houses" and rush parties of any sort were impossible under Navy regulations. One of the main activities of the Council this year was the establishment of rushing rules by which a successful rushing system would be possible. As the entire aim of rushing men was to keep the fraternities alive on the campus, the rushing committee suggested that a maximum of ten men be pledged and a minimum of four week's pledge training before initiation be required for all pledges. These suggestions were passed by the Council and were written into the new rushing rules. By this system, each fraternity was given an equal opportunity to pledge and initiate men. The formal rush week was abolished, and with the permission of the Administration, the C-average and non-C average freshmen were rushed at the same time.

Although war-time travel had cut down on the opportunity to obtain big name bands, the Council was fortunate in acquiring the services of Dean Hudson's band for the Fall Dance. This was the first time a name band has played at a Duke dance in almost two years.

During the latter part of October, the Council held elections for the officers. Jack Lanahan was elected Vice President, Jack Goss was chosen as the new Secretary, and Bill Gulley was selected for the position of Treasurer, replacing Nelson Stephens, Sterling Tucker, and Bill Schuchardt, respectively. Tim Moore continued to guide the Council as President.

Thus the Council went through its first semesters under the Navy Program and looked forward to a continuation of its policy of binding fraternities together, settling fraternity problems under war-time conditions, and insuring the existence of fraternities on this campus as long as possible, in order to give to old and new college members a fraternity life.

WOMAN'S PAN-HEL. COUNCIL

THE officers for the Woman's Pan-Hellenic Council for the year 1943-44 were: Elsie Crone, President; Betty Stribling, Vice President; Nancy Broadhurst, Secretary; and Elizabeth Lewis, Treasurer.

Really proving its value as a worthwhile and far-seeing organization on the campus this year, the 1943-44 Woman's Pan-Hellenic Council has striven to bring about closer cooperation between the various sororities and between sorority and non-sorority women. Several sweeping changes were instituted that affected the activities of the sorority women who constitute nearly one half of the Woman's College community.

Working in close cooperation with the Administration, the council first introduced first-semester rushing and a preferential bidding system, which have been acknowledged immeasurably superior to the system formerly in use, and which have met with the approval of everyone. The Pan-Hellenic rushing rules were completely revised to meet the new situation. Many formerly vague rulings were made more explicit, and new ones constructed where necessity demanded.

One of the Council's additions to the several means that have been devised to assist freshmen in their problems concerning sororities was the creation of a booklet devoted exclusively to the incoming women and their questions.

The council kept in close touch with the COGS, in that it adopted the policy of having a War Work Chairman in each sorority. As in past years, discussion groups were held, in which problems of interest to all, such as pledge training, vocational guidance and the like were taken up.

The Pan-Hellenic Council again this year sponsored open houses in the early fall for the freshmen women. With the permission of the Administration, the Council again made it possible to have pledge dances, which had been foregone in the past few years. In an attempt to solve partially the recreation problem of a campus at war, the Council, working jointly with the Men's Pan-Hellenic Council, inaugurated a series of weekly dances in the Ark.

A one hundred dollar scholarship was presented to the Junior woman having the highest scholastic standing in her class by this year's Council. In addition to this yearly presentation, a one hundred dollar War Bond was also purchased, to be applied to the Alice Mary Baldwin Scholarship.

MISS DOTTIE GROOME was chosen 1943-1944 Beauty Queen by midshipmen of U. S. Naval Academy.

The pageantry and color of the announcement of the Beauty Queen for 1944 remained unchanged this year, despite war-time conditions. The Coed Ball reflected the splendor and tradition of other years and was greeted with the same anxious enthusiasm. Twenty beauties awaited the announcement breathlessly; and, when a hooded figure was ushered on to the dance floor, there was an immediate burst of applause as Dottie Groome was revealed as the Duke Beauty Queen for 1944.

Many weeks before the Ball, both campuses voted on their twenty choices for the coveted position. These were submitted to the midshipmen at Annapolis for the final decision which was revealed at the Ball. All queens were invited to Annapolis and were entertained one weekend as honored guests of the Navy.

The Beauty Queen tradition is still one of the most popular at Duke. This year, the enthusiasm was continued and the Coed Ball remained as the outstanding social event of the year.

DANCES

ONCE AGAIN this year, social activities were supervised by the W.S.A.B.; and though the dances lacked the lavish decorations of former years, the season was studded with a great variety of informal and formal affairs.

The S.G.A. started the social ball rolling with their "Fall Prom," first general campus dance after the arrival of the 1,600 naval and marine trainees. The music was provided by Sammy Fletcher and his Duke Ambassadors without compensation in accordance with naval regulations. With this dance the new men had a chance to get a look at East Campus "Duchesses" and taste a Duke social function.

Then in October, the continued agitation for a "big name" band at last had some results when Pan-Hel. officials signed Dean Hudson's Band for its post-Carolina homecoming dance. This band, although not in the upper tier of "big name" bands, is regarded as one of the most popular organizations on the road on the Atlantic seaboard. Recently reorganized, it had its start at the University of Florida. Many who attended the dance realized that it would be their last big dance as undergraduates at Duke; for graduation on October twenty-fifth was very near. These graduates could look back on a busy final two weeks, for the Engineer's Ball had been held on October ninth, with the music of Herb Gupton of Raleigh and the highlight of the D.E.S. tapping when the traditional black hooded figure placed the names of outstanding junior and senior engineers on a giant D.E.S. key. A second highlight of the evening was a play-by-play announcement of the Duke-Navy game to the dancers.

The first informal of the year was the YMCA Sadie Hawkins at which gobs, leathernecks, civilians and duchesses let their hair down. At intermission five of the coeds staged a "Sadie Hawkins" race, which was won by Anne Fouch, who was given the title of Miss Sadie Hawkins and was supposed to typify the average Duke coed. She and her date then participated in the drawing for two war bonds, given as door prizes.

On November nineteenth West Campus began to chew its fingernails, and cross its fingers, as bids for the Coed Ball headed Westward. Then on Thanksgiving Eve, lucky West Campsites saw the presentation of the CHANICLER beauty queen, Dottie Groome. She was selected by the Annapolis midshipmen from pictures submitted to them of the group of twenty coeds chosen earlier in the fall by a campus-wide vote. Amid the hushed breaths of the crowd, a black caped and masked figure entered the gym, escorted by Henry Nicholson, editor-in-chief of the CHANICLER, who then unmasked Miss Groome and crowned her queen. She was followed by two pages carrying her flowers and the crown. The presentation of the queen was followed by the traditional Social Standards no-break dance, led this year by Dottie Watkins, chairman of the Social Standards. The figure consisted of a spiral formation with the Navy men in dress uniform, carrying sabers. At the end of the formation, the group formed one large circle for the entrance of the queen. The Social Standards members were dressed in white formals with long white gloves and carried red roses.

Another queen was born the following week when the Navy, not to be outdone, presented its third annual Navy Ball. The queen, Miss Dot Hyland entered the gym under an archway of crossed sabers, held aloft by a detail of cadets, and proceeded across the gym, where she was crowned by Captain A. T. Clay. Later, was a grand march which was led by Anne Suceup and Sam Fletcher.

There is not another word for queen; so we must say again that Duke had yet another queen in Charlotte Crane, who was selected Freshman Beauty Queen at the F.A.C. Prom. This "last fling" before the women's exams saw Sammy Fletcher back on the bandstand.

Highlighting the S.G.A. informal dance on January twenty-ninth, was the absence of the crowning of a queen. Making his first appearance with a reorganized band, was Ben Massey.

Other dances followed: B.O.S., in which new members were tapped into the honorary sophomore leadership organization; the strictly informal "Hey Day" dance, in which women and men stags were the result of the dating problem caused by the departure of many old Duke men. This was the first large-scale attempt to give East and West campuses a chance to get acquainted.

Then came the Engineer's Ball on February 12, a complete success.

Highlight of the spring semester was the Coed Ball, at which the May Queen was chosen from the Senior Class. So honored this year was Beth Holcombe. For this dance, the W.S.A.B.

relaxed its strict no-decorations ruling and the gym was gay in flower and blue and white decoration. S.G.A. President Gordon Carver crowned the queen, and music was provided by Shirley Smith.

At the beginning of the new semester especially, a new atmosphere could be found at Duke social affairs. Gone were the super-sophisticates, and here was a new informal Duke. It is to be hoped that this feeling of fellowship and cooperation is here to stay, and that Duke may be known as a friendly place.

GOOD SPORTSMAN- SHIP AND TEAMWORK THE GOAL OF EVERY SPORT

To know how to play a game fairly, with endurance and teamwork—this is what we should learn from football, soccer and the other sports. Whether we go out for these sports for fun or for work, we should at all times be conscious of the fact that stamina and good sportsmanship are most important.

A man is judged in his playing by his sense of fair play, and by his natural ability to think clearly and to coordinate his muscles quickly and efficiently. If a man can do all that well, he is recognized as a good sportsman. His consideration for his team—letting the other fellow get his share of glory—also stands foremost in the definition of a good player.

Duke's football team has long been cited as one of the best in the country, and we have been proud of that honor, knowing that our team has tried honestly and fairly to play the game as it should be played.

There are opportunities for such sportsmanship in all the other sports as well—sports that may not have been glamorized to such an extent as football, but which deserve just as much praise. The basketball teams, the soccer teams, fencing, wrestling—all these demand honest rivalry and ability of the players for endurance.

Yet there is something more to sportsmanship than those factors just mentioned. After the game is over, the courteous acceptance of results by the team, whether these results be success or failure, is most important. There are certain standards of courtesy and behavior which one must recognize as being significant. Here again a sense of honesty and fairness, a respect for one's competitors, determine the manner of accepting a victory or loss.

*"To set the cause above renown,
To love the game beyond the prize,
To honor, while you strike him down,
The foe that comes with fearless eyes."*

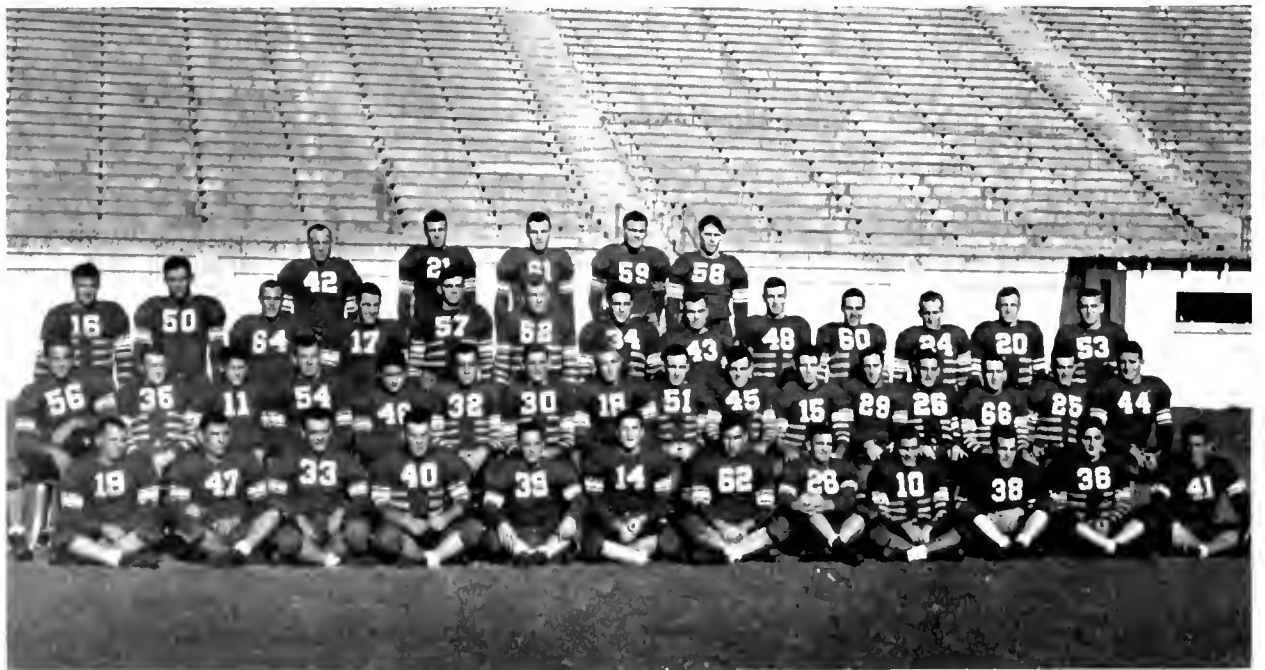

FOOTBALL SEASON

THE SUMMER of 1943 saw an influx of Navy and Marine trainees take over the Duke campus, and one of the strongest grid teams in Devil history in the making. Drawn mostly from the Marine training detachment, the squad was stacked several men deep in every position. Potentially, the squad was one of the best in the nation if it could be whipped into shape before the opening of the season. Coach Eddie Cameron, who had succeeded Wallace Wade when Wade accepted an Army Commission, went to his task with a will, and turned out the team that went through the 1942 season with only one defeat on its record.

Week after week the Blue Devils rolled over one opponent after another by topheavy scores. Only in late October did they taste defeat, dropping a bitterly contested 14-13 battle to the Naval Academy's power-laden squad.

Hampered by the scholastic schedule under which the trainees work, the team could only practice about an hour a day. In spite of this shortened practice session, the wrinkles were soon ironed out as the players got used to Coach Cameron's system of play, and used to one another. Hindered by a Navy ruling that no men could participate in varsity sports until they had been in the V-12 program at least eight weeks, the team was not able to start practice until a few short weeks before the start of the season.

CAMP LEJEUNE 40-0

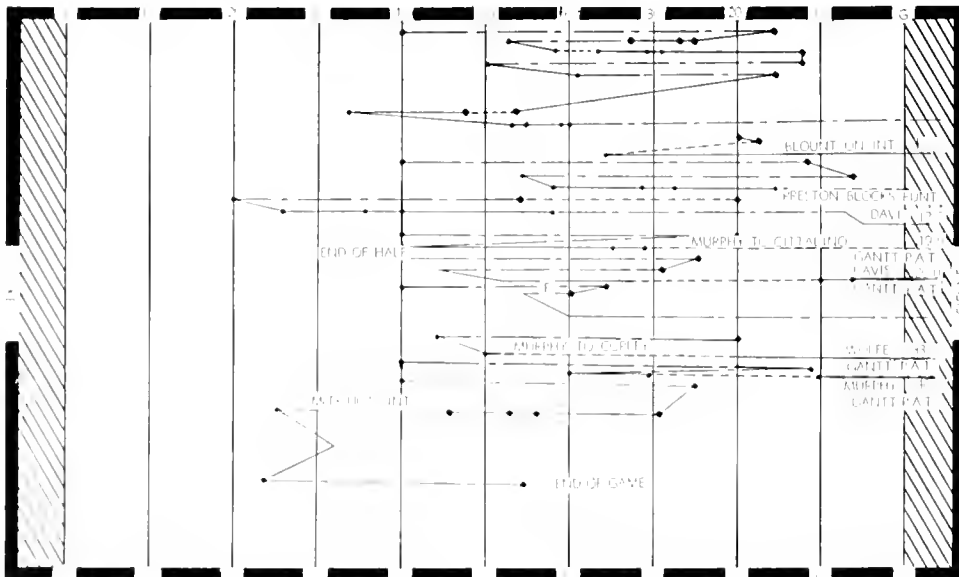

Opening the season against the Camp Lejeune Marine team from New River, North Carolina, the Devils walked off with the contest, 40-0. Showing their power, the Duke team scored its first touchdown late in the first quarter when half-back Lloyd Blount intercepted a Leatherneck pass and cut through the entire Marine team for 36 yards and the score. Sparked by hard-running full-back, Tom Davis, who scored two of the six touchdowns, our team went on to pile up a 40 point score. Duke's All-American tackle, Pat Preston, set up the second tally by blocking a punt deep in Leatherneck territory. Ace back, Buddy Luper continued his flashy playing that has become well-known in the previous season, ripping off several long runs and tossing one touchdown pass to Benny Cittadino.

UNIVERSITY OF RICHMOND SPIDERS

Rolling along under a full head of steam, the Blue Devils took the University of Richmond's Spiders in stride, beating them, 61-0. The Duke squad scored its first touchdown of the afternoon on the second play of the game when Buddy Luper tossed a pass from his own 41 yard line to Lloyd Blount who went over for the score. Later in the same period, the Devils stretched their lead when tackle Bob Nanni recovered a Richmond punt, blocked by end, Herman Smith, for the second tally of the game. The third score came in the second period on a short line plunge by Bill Murphy.

Tailback Spook Murphy, convoyed by Trapani, heads downfield.

Opening the second half with a bang, the Devils scored again in four plays. Buddy Luper ran the kickoff back from his own 35 yard stripe to Richmond's 19. On two more plays he carried the ball to the 6, and Blount went over for the score. Later in the quarter Bobby Rute made the score, 33-0, by plunging into the end zone from the 2 yard marker. The final period started with Bob McDougal scoring Duke's sixth touchdown on a drive through the line. The next score came when Buddy Mulligan, playing his last game before leaving for the Navy Air Corps, cut loose from his own 35 on a reverse from McDougal to race 65 yards up the field for a score. The game came to a close with further scores by Bobby Rute and Johnny Perry.

Blue and White game climaxes preparations for Virginia.

But whether Duke won or not, in this or any other game, Uncle Sam benefitted. In accordance with the times, University officials announced that Duke's share of the game receipts would go to the war bond drive.

So the people who came to the stadium for this game killed two birds with one stone—they helped invasion forces, and they saw two grid foes meet for the first time in fifteen years. They saw two strong offensive teams battling each other in a good game.

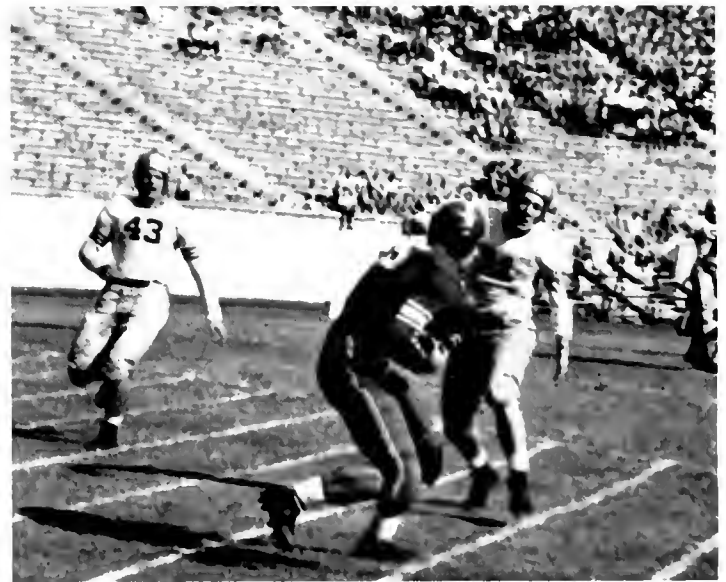

Fleet-footed Lloyd Blount pulls away from Cloudbuster tacklers on reverse play.

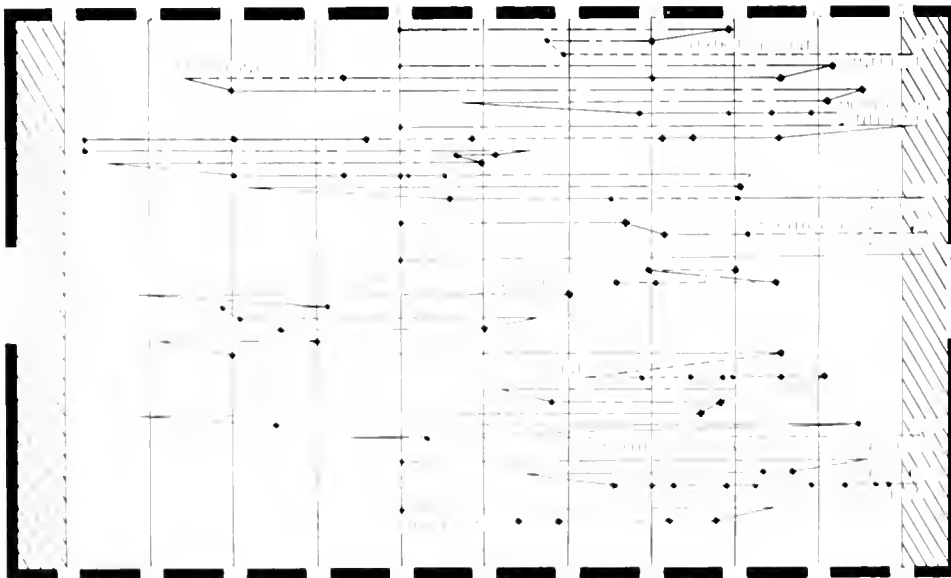

Going full blast, having already won two games by lopsided scores, Eddie Cameron's battling Blue Devils rolled over the invading Carolina Pre-Flight team, 42-0. Taking to the air, the Duke squad scored three of its six touchdowns on passes. The first score came in the opening minutes of the game on a long heave from Luper to Lloyd Blount. Bob Gant's ever faithful toe, split the uprights with the conversion to put the home team out in front. Later in the first quarter Bill "Spook" Murphy added another touchdown to the score on a thirteen yard dash. Luper crossed the goal line for the third tally late in the second quarter to make the score, 20-0, and Gant added the extra point.

Finishing the half in the air, Murphy tossed a pass to Gordy Carver for another six points. Although no scoring was done in the third period, the game was all Duke's, Pre-Flights Cloudbusters getting the ball past the 50 yard stripe only twice. The fourth quarter saw Duke racking up another two scores on a pass from Bill Murphy to Johnny Perry, and a line plunge by Bobby Rute. Bob Gant's place kicking stood out as he made six consecutive extra points in as many attempts. Linemen Pat Preston, Bill Milner, and Jim Myers stood out on both the offense and defense. They made possible much of Duke's offensive action. Pre-Flight could do little to keep them out of their hair.

Playing the Middies in Baltimore in a night game, the Devils suffered their only defeat of the season, 13-13. The margin of victory was a missed extra point in the fourth quarter. Duke took an early lead in the first quarter, but lost it when Navy scored two in the second period. In a spirited last quarter drive for victory, sophomore back, Howard Hartley, scored leading the Devils in a 63 yard offensive push. Gantt failed to make the crucial conversion.

Meeting their traditional rivals in the first of two games for the season, the Devils came through in a closely fought battle to defeat Carolina's Tar Heels, 14-7. Duke scored in each of the first two quarters on a run from a double reverse by Tom Davis, and an intercepted pass by Howard Hartley. Carolina scored in the fourth period on a pass and a long run. Gantt made both of his extra point attempts good. Carolina's late rally was halted completely.

GEORGIA TECH 14-7

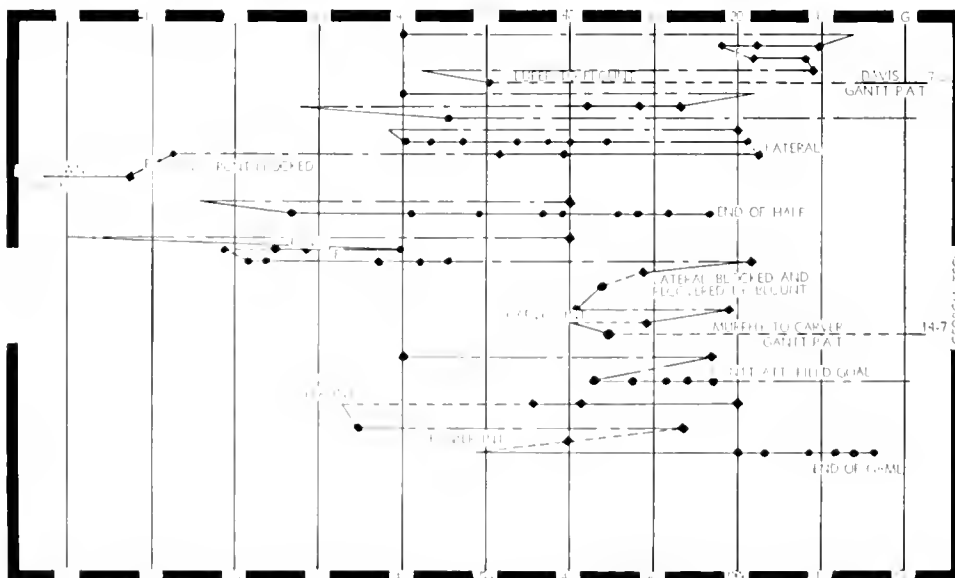

With many of the Blue Devils playing their last college grid contest, the Duke team went through Atlanta with the same devastating effects as Sherman, defeating Georgia Tech's Ramblin' Wrecks, 14-7. The Devil's scored on two passes, one in the first quarter, and one in the fourth. The first tally through the familiar passing-receiving combination of Luper to Blount. Tech tied the score in the second period on a lateral from Prokop to Brown. The game remained an evenly contested battle until the fourth quarter when Bill Murphy let go a 36 yard pass that landed in the waiting arms of Gordy Carver in the end zone. Bob Gantt, per usual, made both extra points to cinch the game for the invading Blue Devils. An outstanding factor in this Duke victory was the line play of tackle Pat Preston and guard Bill Milner. The pass plays would have been impossible without a forward wall capable of stopping the hard-driving Tech line, which included two All-Americans.

STATE 75-0

Playing its first game of the second Navy semester, the Blue Devils appeared as an entirely different team from the one that had squelched its opponents during the first six games of the season. A fast, flashy, Duke team, in its shake-down game, completely smothered a weak North Carolina State squad, 75-0. Coach Cameron played every man on the team who was not on the injured list. The Dukes scored a total of eleven touchdowns: two in the first quarter, four in the second, three in the third, and two in the fourth. The Devils opened their scoring drive with a double reverse that caught State completely off guard, Benny Cittadino going over from the 15 yard line. Fred Floger and Buddy Luper led the Duke scoring with two touchdowns apiece. State was never in the ball game from start to finish and was hopelessly outclassed.

Continuing their winning streak, Duke's football team ran over the University of Virginia's Cavaliers, 49-0. Buddy Luper opened the scoring on a 28 yard run before the game was three minutes old. Late in the first quarter Gordy Carver added another six points on a brilliant 70 yard dash. During the second quarter George Balitsaris and Howard Hartley added two more tallies on short, line plunges. The only scoring in the third period came when guard Bill Milner took a lateral pass and went 35 yards to score. George Balitsaris took top scoring honors for the game by scoring his second touchdown of the afternoon in the last period. This one was on a run from the 15 yard line. The dependable toe of Bob Gantt added all seven of the attempted extra points to the total score. Virginia's offense was sparked by the brilliant passing of Ellis and Burnett. Their ground attack could get no where against the strong Blue Devil line.

This game was the first time that the Virginia Cavaliers had faced the Duke Blue Devils since 1930. It was the sixth time since 1890, and in that time both teams had each registered three wins. The Virginia team was fresh from a 39-0 victory of the University of Maryland team the previous week. Once again on a football gridiron, the single wingback formation did battle with the "T" setup; and Duke's practice of the Cavalier plays served them to good advantage.

Both schools had high scoring teams fresh from overwhelming victories. For the winning Duke team, it meant at least a tie for and another step toward the Southern Conference championship.

WHITE SQUAD

WHEN Head Football Coach Eddie Cameron sounded first call for varsity football practice early last September, he was greeted by roughly 100 candidates. Realizing that close to ten teams was more than he could handle on one squad, Coach Cameron decided to split the players into two groups, after selecting the cream of the crop for his varsity.

The second squad cannot be referred to as the Junior Varsity or scrub team. It included in its number football players who could have made a Duke eleven in any year except this, when the coaches found themselves in the dream-like situation of having too many players. That is why it was called the White Squad.

Evidence of the caliber of the squad is of course, its record, registering exactly three victories for a 1000 average.

Former freshman coach Herschel Caldwell was placed in charge of the team and was ably assisted by Chief Specialists Jontos, Falcone, and Adam, all three of whom were former collegiate satellites. The schedule consisted of two engagements with the UNC B squad and one with the Chapel Hill Pre-Flight B team.

Caldwell's charges opened their campaign with a 7-0 triumph over the Tar heels in a night affair played in the Greensboro Memorial Stadium. Grid fans numbering 6,500 watched Duke capitalize on a break to win the ball game. In the final period, Carolina's Dewell attempted to punt, but guard Charlie Hood broke through to block his kick. Wingback Johnny Grace recovered on the UNC 39. After being pushed back to their 22 yard line, Carolina stiffened for three downs. On fourth down, and with nine yards to go, Grace skirted right end for 22 yards and the contest's only score. Although Duke won, UNC, held the edge in first downs, with 13 to Duke's 3.

The Pre-Flight encounter was something of a history-making event. The two participants were the first football teams ever to be transported by glider plane to the site of a game.

The game was played at Camp Mackall, a paratroop training base. On the morning of the clash, the players boarded three CG4-A glider troop carriers, each of which was towed by a C-47 transport plane, at the Chapel Hill airport.

The contest itself, played before 12,000 soldiers, was rough and tumble throughout. Duke won 7-6. On the first play of the second period, Flash Brady, ex-Chattanooga seatback, wriggled his way through the Navy line for 80 yards and a touchdown. Buddy Palmer converted. The fliers rallied in the closing minutes of play, however, and scored when Cecil Hare, former Washington Redskin performer, connected with quarterback Paul Hart from 21 yards out. The try for the extra point was smothered by a fast-charging Duke line. The touchdown climaxed a 65 yard drive. Shu Carlton, Glynn Cooke, and Hood stood out in the victors' forward wall.

The remaining game on the White Squad's schedule was a return match with Carolina. Playing in the Fayetteville high school bowl for the entertainment of soldiers from Fort Bragg, the Blue Devils came from behind to win, 12-6.

BASKETBALL

SEASON

1943-1944

COACH GERARD

DUKE'S BLUE DEVIL basketball team ran into one of those upsetting seasons in which the squad as a whole was much better than the record indicates. Coach Jerry Gerard's team losing thirteen and winning ten during the regular season, faced a schedule as hard, if not harder, than any team in the history of basketball at Duke. The opposition, for the most part, consisted of service teams from nearby army and navy camps, teams which were manned by ex-college stars and professionals from all over the country.

The Blue Devils opened their season by defeating the Camp Butler 12th Replacement Center, 62-36, in the Indoor Stadium. Coach Gerard used 18 players chosen from a field of more than 60 squad candidates and was able to keep a fresh five on the floor throughout, a fact that caused trouble for the Army team. Bill Wright, a marine transfer from the University of Tennessee, was high scorer with 16 points.

Duke then traveled to Chapel Hill to meet the powerful North Carolina Pre-Flight Cloudbusters. The Blue Devils could not match the speed, accuracy, and experience of the Navy men, as the Cloudbusters won, 58-39. Bud Palmer, former Princeton star, and Whitey Myers, the pride of Dartmouth, scored 25 points between them. Wright again led the Duke offensive, with 13 points. Duke next met a heretofore unheard-of Milligan College quintet. Little Milligan beat big Duke, 46-40, much to the surprise of everyone in the Indoor Stadium. Presenting a fast-breaking outfit with a talent for recovering the ball in any situation, Milligan kept the Duke forwards well tied up. Fred Coulter, Milligan's ace forward, led the scoring with 19 points. Gordon Carver led the Blue Devils in scoring.

The Blue Devils won their next three games, beating Hampden-Sydney, 50-25, and the Columbia, South Carolina, Army Air Base, 52-33, in the Indoor Stadium, then traveling to nearby Camp Butner to defeat the latter for the second time, 49-41. The Blue Devil record stood at four wins and two losses.

Charleston Coast Guard provided Coach Gerard's outfit with plenty of opposition, as the former won, 52-46. In one of the best games played in the Indoor Stadium the Blue Devils nosed out the Fort Bragg Reception Center, 42-40. Wright continued to pace the Devils, this time sinking 11 points. Cedric Loftis, former Duke star, and Hampton led the Bragg scoring with 15 points each. Gene Bledsoe and Henry Hyde were outstanding in the guarding for Duke. The Blue Devils lost again to Pre-Flight, 48-35.

Traveling to Madison Square Garden in New York to play Long Island University, the Blue Devils lost in an overtime to the New Yorkers, 59-57. Carver set a Garden scoring record for the year, with 27 points. Norfolk Naval Air Station then beat the Blue Devils, 61-28. Duke sustained another loss, this time by the Cherry Point Marines, 54-52. The Blue Devils got on the winning side in their next game by downing the Richmond Air Base, 44-38. In a return game with Norfolk Air Station, the flyers nosed out Duke 52-51, in another close loss for Coach Gerard's team. In the first game with Carolina, the Heels beat Duke, 37-33, in a game which saw Duke relinquish an 11-point lead in the second half. Norfolk Naval Training Station, reputedly the best service team in the country, rolled over Duke, 72-59, to give the Blue Devils 6 wins and 10 defeats.

Duke then lost to Norfolk Training Station again by one point, and traveled to Annapolis to be defeated by Navy by three points, then returned to North Carolina to defeat N. C.

These cagers jump as Coast Guard stands ready.

State, 60-36, defeated South Carolina, then won over Carolina, but lost to the Heels in the rubber game, 39-30. Duke completed their regular season by trouncing N. C. State, 53-32.

Going into the Southern Conference Tournament as under-dogs, the Blue Devils put on a spurt and rolled over all opposition. They defeated William and Mary and North Carolina State in the preliminaries, then ran over the University of North Carolina, 44-27, to take the title.

The Devils started the tournament with an easy 68-25 victory over William and Mary, the latter team substituting at the last minute for the University of South Carolina. Duke then met North Carolina State, a team which the Blue Devils had beaten twice during the regular season. Duke bumped into some unexpected opposition in meeting the Red Terrors. The Terrors trailed by a 16 to 1 score before they got their first field goal, and a bit later they were behind by 18 points, 22-4. State put on a scoring spree in the second half to give the Blue Devils one of their closest moments in the entire tournament. Gordon Carver of Duke, who made three field goals in the opening 90 seconds of play and had nine points at the end of the first half, was high scorer for the game with 11 points. The final count for the game was a close 40-32 Duke victory.

Duke met the University of North Carolina in the final round of the tourney. Previously the two teams had played three games during the regular season with the White Phantoms holding a 2-1 edge over the Blue Devils. The Devils ruled the underdog going into the contest. Both teams put up an effective defensive game in the early minutes of play and neither team tallied until after five minutes of play. Then big John Dewell, Carolina center, sank a free throw and Captain Bernie Mock and Boyce Box followed with field goals to give the Tar Heel cagers a 7-0 lead that was soon to be drowned out by the Duke courtsters.

Duke quickly sank 4 field goals and dead-locked the Heels at 8-8 with ten minutes in the first half still left to play. The Devils coasted to a 27-17 advantage at the half. After the intermission the Blue Devils ran their lead to 35-19 and put away all doubt as to their mastery. Limiting the Heels to only five points until the period was half gone, the Gerard-coached squad then settled down and stopped short a determined Carolina rally that simply would not click.

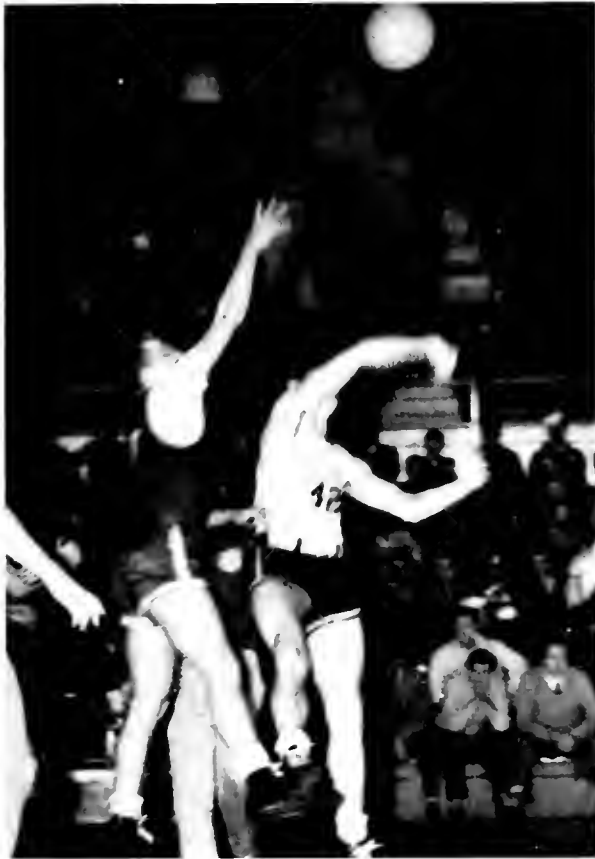

The Devils were highly effective on lay-up and crisp shots, countering repeatedly from close in. Their long shots, too, were accurate. Defensively, they used a man-to-man, closely knit game that kept the Heels' shots well scattered. The Blue Devils managed to control the ball most of the time and at only one point were the Heels able to muster enough strength for anything like a definite scoring spree.

Bill Wright was the offensive star for the Blue Devils. He racked up 15 points to lead all scoring, and played a brilliant game afield. Gordon Carver got 11 points, most of which resulted from shots made from difficult angles and from far out in mid-court.

One factor in the Blue Devils' triumph was the competitive spirit of the Navy transfers on the team. During the football season the Duke coaches managed to put that spirit into the transfers. Gerard, evidently, succeeded in doing it with the cagers. Gerard, in commenting on the game with the Heels, thought that the deciding factor in the contest was the play under the backboards.

The Blue Devils succeeded George Washington University as champions of the Southern Conference. This season George Washington did not have a team.

Duke placed two men on the first team of the Associated Press all-tournament team. Gordon Carver and Bill Wright had this honor bestowed on them. Both were placed on the mythical team in the guard positions. Harry Harner made the second team in the guard post. Bill Bailey received honorable mention in the voting.

Harry Harner jumps for the ball—but misses.

The Blue Devil basketball schedule this season consisted largely of teams representing the armed forces in the Southern area. Norfolk Naval Training Station and Norfolk Naval Air Base, two of the strongest service teams in the country, beat Duke. Among the other service teams played were the strong Carolina Naval Pre-Flight Cloudbusters, a star-studded outfit with several former collegiate stars in their ranks, such as Bud Palmer of Princeton fame and Whitey Myers of Dartmouth, the Charleston, S. C., Coast Guard, Columbia, S. C., Air Base, and the Cherry Point Marines.

The United States Naval Academy at Annapolis has been added to the schedules of practically every Duke sport. If these athletic relations with the Naval Academy continue after the war, a Duke-Naval rivalry may result.

Basketball is very important during war time. It is a winter sport which has steadily gained popularity during the past decade. In war time, it trains young men to have much endurance. Basketball players cover a lot of ground during a game, and they must be in the best of physical shape to counteract this need for stamina. As this endurance is developed during the games in which a basketball player participates, he trains, perhaps unknowingly for the war effort. Fighting men require the maximum of endurance and stamina, and basketball gives them this training. The game is definitely contributing largely to the war effort.

Coach Jerry Gerard has completed his second year as head basketball coach, in place of Eddie Cameron, who is acting director of athletics while Wallace Wade is on active duty as a Lieutenant Colonel. Besides being head basketball coach, Gerard holds the position of Director of Intramural athletics, and in this post he has given Duke an intramural program that rates with the best in the intercollegiate world. He formed the first soccer team at Duke in 1935, and has acted as the sport's coach since that time.

Gerard graduated from the University of Illinois in 1928, where he was a member of the football and track teams. He acted as head coach at Athens (Pa.) High School for a year and then returned to Illinois as a physical education teacher and assistant freshman football coach. He held this position for two years before coming to Duke in 1932.

Under Gerard's guidance during the past two years, the Duke Basketball teams have been runner-ups in the 1943 Southern Conference basketball race, and have been throned once more to kings of the Southern Conference courts tourney.

CHEER LEADERS

"CHEER, boys, cheer," those were the sentiments expressed with much gusto by the eight members of the cheer leading squad at various football and basketball games during the respective seasons of '43 and '44. Faced with the conglomerated mass of students from colleges all over the United States, the cheer leaders labored with the crowds, teaching the spectators the yells of the alma mater, and spurring the team on through victory and defeat. The Duke spirit, feeble at the opening of football season, swelled to a great uproar during the tension of ensuing games.

Pep rallies highlighted the frenzied football season. Torchlight parades and rollicking campus-to-town marches turned out East and West campuses for pre-Carolina sessions. With the final gun of the hardwood series, cheer leaders packed away white sweaters, slacks, and skirts, and looked forward to an even better season next year.

Jumping Joe DiMona, the only head cheer leader in history to lead yells from a prone position on the platform, captained his septet during the football games. Joe, who found it a welcome relief to switch from V-12 blues to cheer leader blues with the arrival of each contest, and Ann Fouch, senior co-ed, were the only returning pepsters in the squad.

With the advent of basketball, Joe passed the torch of leadership to Fred Plesner, a junior from Great Neck, Long Island. He, and the remaining six, cheered the Blue Devil cagers on to a Southern Conference championship. The West campus contingent of the squad were Jud Huntley, of the N.R.O.T.C. from Westfield, N. J., Steve Stockslager, also from Westfield, and a V-12 engineer, and Ed Stancik, from Chicago, Illinois, who came to Duke in July, 1943, from Marine Fleet Duty.

The co-ed teamsters were presented at the second pep rally of the year. Ann Fouch of Orrville, Ohio, won her athletic letter as she completed her third year of cheer leading in Duke Stadium. Dot Hyland from San Antonio, Texas, and Joyce Dean of Indianapolis, Indiana, sophomores at Duke, filled the two remaining positions as co-ed cheer leaders.

Let's give a hand to these seven boys and girls who were responsible for the cheers for Eddie and Jerry and their boys. They did their best to keep the traditional Duke spirit so hard to maintain in these times.

*Fight, loyal Duke sons,
Fight for victory;
Proudly we hail thee,
Win or lose we'll be.
And we will stand by our colors
Hail the blue and white—
Fight, fight on for Alma Mater, Fight, team, fight!*

CROSS COUNTRY

AFTER an absence of a year from the Duke sports scene, cross country was revived last fall, with Chief Specialist Charles Aberne at the helm.

The response of trainees was gratifying, and Chief Aberne produced a fairly successful team from the squad of candidates. Practice began on September 15.

On Saturday afternoon, October 2, the Blue and White harriers opened their season in Duke Stadium. Other participants in the meet were teams from Chapel Hill Pre-Flight school, Camp Butner, North Carolina, and Virginia. Led into action by miler Bill Palmer, Duke's inexperienced hill-and-dalers got off to a good start but fell behind in the latter stages of the run and finished in fourth place. Pre-Flight, Carolina, and Virginia took the first three places.

Coach Aberne's charges learned much, however, from their first taste of competition and profited from their mistakes. The following three weeks were devoted to remedying uncovered weaknesses and preparing for their next engagement, on October 30.

The Duke runners traveled to Annapolis for their second meet, a triangular affair with the Naval Academy and Virginia. This time the Blue Devils succeeded in defeating Virginia but could not muster sufficient closing drive to overcome the middies' early lead.

The last scheduled meeting of the year was to have been a return engagement with Carolina. UNC athletic officers acknowledged the scheduling of the meet but Tar Heel coaches, however, claimed ignorance of the event and that their team was unprepared to compete. The meet, consequently, was forfeited to Duke.

Outstanding performers on the squad, in addition to Palmer, included Dave Byrne, University of Illinois transfer; Direk Arrowsmith, a newcomer to the sport; and Ken Saturday, erstwhile regular on Coach Jack Persons' swimming team.

Duke fielded no 1942 cross-country team mainly because of a lack of opponents, participants, and a coach. Former coach Hubert "Red" Lewis entered the service early that autumn, necessitating the abandonment of the activity.

This year the schedule and outcomes of the meets, the enthusiasm shown by the boys who participated in the sport, and the promising material Coach Aberne had to work with seem to indicate that cross country will be continued in the Duke sports arena in coming years. Perhaps with the practice and experience that was gained this year, the greased-lightning boys from Duke will be able to make a place for themselves in the field.

SOCCER

PROSPECTS at the outset of last fall's soccer season were fairly bright. Coach Jerry Gerard, assisted by Ensign Wade Bowser, former collegiate soccer star, viewed the return of seven varsity lettermen with optimism. The outlook was better than it had been in several years.

Veteran booters reporting for action included goalie Hal Landesberg, fullbacks Ed Cunliff and Frank Sedwick, wings Bob Metzler and Dick Bayman, center-half Herb Smith, and inside-left George McGinnis. Outstanding among the new candidates were Jack Stasulli, marine trainee and former High Point college center-forward, Dick Harkness, and a pair of freshmen twins, George and Don Russell.

Making their debut on September 29, the Blue Devils dropped a hard-fought contest to the Chapel Hill Pre-Flight school, 2-1. Coached by Lt. Earle C. Waters, who produced several national championship teams while at Westchester State Teachers College in Pennsylvania, the Cloudbusters boasted a number of all-stars in their lineup.

After a scoreless first period, Joe Koelsch, Navy Captain, registered the first goal late in the second quarter, taking a pass from wingman Eddie Jackline. Stasulli tied things up for Duke with a counter in the third frame, but Pre-Flight broke the ice in the closing moments of the game when Harry Morris outfaked the Duke defense to score the winning point.

The Blue Devils' second match was a return engagement with the Pre-Flights on October 6. The Navy representatives again eked out a close triumph, this time by a 4-3 score. Although the Devils kept the ball in Cloudbuster territory throughout most of the game, they failed to sustain several drives which might have resulted in scores. Pacing Duke were the Russell twins, Stasulli, and Harkness. Again sparking the fliers was Harry Morris, who pushed over three of his team's four goals.

For its last game, Duke traveled to Annapolis, Md., where it succumbed to a powerful Naval Academy barrage, 7-0, in an exceedingly rough battle.

The game of soccer is still a young one as far as Duke university is concerned. Last fall's campaign marked only the seventh year that soccer has been played on the Trinity campus. Both the response and enthusiasm for the sport, however, regardless of the success of the teams themselves, more than justifies its continuance here and guarantees bigger things for Duke soccer after the war has ended and the collegiate sports scene returns to normal.

Perhaps the season's most amusing incident occurred in the Pre-Flight fracas when a Duke naval trainee, remembering a bit late that his opponent was an officer, shouted, "Why the hell don't you watch where you're going—sir!"

SWIMMING

URRT by a lack of returning veterans, the Duke swimming team went through its worst season in years, winning only one of its six dual meets. The main weakness on this winter's team was a definite lack of free-style dash men. The only returning tankman in these events was woody Venable, captain of this year's team. Outstanding in the ranks of the mermen this winter were Venable and yearling ace, Bill Adams. Adams swam all strokes but got his points mainly in the 150 yard backstroke and the free-style distance events. Opening the season against the University of North Carolina's Blue Dolphins, the Devils lost, 48-27, winning only the 400 yard free-style relay. The Tar Heel squad this season was one of the best tank teams in the nation, barring none.

Still short of free-style men, the Dukes dropped their second dual meet to Georgia Tech, 42-33. This meet was lost when Tech captured the last event, the 400 yard free-style relay. Duke was still in the running when that event was started.

The third meet on the slate was the Carolinas AAU meet held at the University of North Carolina. In this competition the Devilfish placed second behind Carolina, defeating Georgia Tech.

Taking to the road for the first time, the Dukesters traveled to Annapolis where they were completely scuttled by a powerful Navy tank squad. Taking no firsts at all, the Middies defeated the Duke tank team 60-17. Improving as the season progressed, the Dukes played host to the swimmers of the south in an AAU meet held in the Duke pool. Again Carolina came out on top, 49-36. However, the Duke medley relay team made up of backstroker Bill Adams, breaststroker Jack Scheid, and free-styler Woody Venable, captured one of the coveted national AAU titles by beating out Carolina in this event.

With only three meets remaining on the schedule, the Devils took to the road again to swim two of them. This time the team traveled to Atlanta, Georgia to meet Georgia Tech and Emory. Meeting Emory in the afternoon and Tech at night, the Devils went through a strenuous weekend. Swimming away from home, the Devils won their first victory, defeating Emory, 39-20. Hampered by sickness, the squad dropped its second meet of the season to Tech, 41-34. Swimming their last meet of the season in Chapel Hill, the Devils lost, 42-33.

The swimming team in spite of its repeated defeats this year hopes for a more successful season next year, and at any rate they will be in there swimming for Duke.

WRESTLING

COMPOSED of civilians, Navy and Marine trainees, the 1943-44 edition of Coach Harvey Potter's wrestling squad concluded its most successful season in five years. Winning two out of its five matches, the Duke team split the co-championship of the Big Five with Carolina.

The top men of this year's squad were Herb Stender, Bobby Stroupe, and Bill Milner. Having never before done any competitive wrestling, Stender, a Marine transfer from the Citadel, by virtue of five wins, four by falls and one by forfeit, was the most outstanding grappler on the squad. Navy man Bobby Stroupe, veteran of last year's matches and Southern Conference Meet, gained second honors, winning four out of five bouts. Although Marine Bill Milner only won two out of his three bouts, Bill overcame his opponents to give Duke the winning points of each meet.

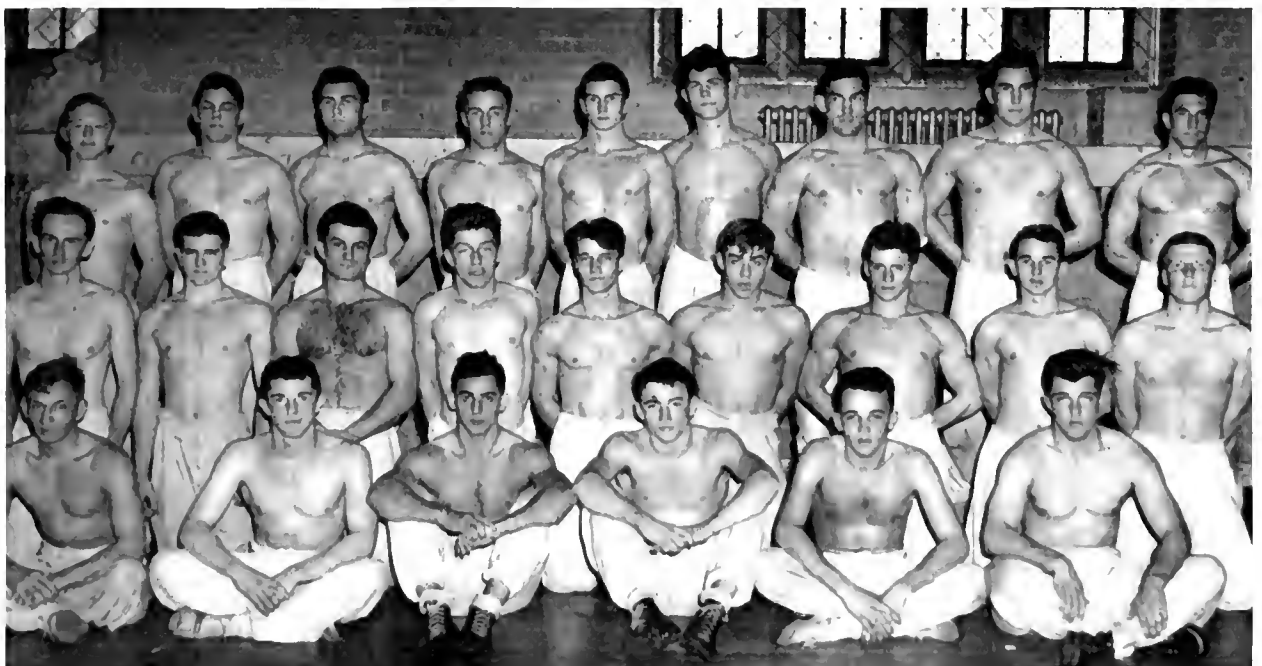

The curtain on the 1943-44 season was raised January 8, when Duke invaded Chapel Hill to engage the Tar Heels. The Devils dropped this match 19-15, Stender, Stroupe, and McCain each contributing their points by falls. The grapplers lost their second match of the season 11-15 to a strong N.C. Pre-Flight squad. Sten-der, Stroupe, and Weil tallied the points for Duke.

In a close contest at Duke, January 21, Duke's grapplers finally won a match of the season, defeating the Carolina Tar Heels 16-14. Stender, Weil, and Jack Woodall, a member of last year's squad, tallied to bring the score to 13-14. Milner clinched the meet by decisioning his seasoned opponent, Hooper, giving Duke its first win by a 16-14 margin. This was the first match won by the Devils in three years and the third in five seasons.

The Pre-Flight Cloudbusters handed Duke its worst defeat of the season February 3 by a score of 20-10. Stender and Stroupe were the only two Devils to capture victories, both doing so by falls. The Blue Devil grapplers concluded the current season February 11, handing the Cherry Point Marines a 21-15 defeat. Stender won the first bout of the meet by forfeit, and Stroupe, Weil, and Woodall went ahead to bring the score to Duke's favor 16-15. Milner, coming through for the second time this season, pinned his man, making the final score 21-15 in favor of Duke.

Although the Southern Conference has been compelled to drop wrestling from its calendar of activities, Duke will continue the sport. Stender would have undoubtedly been a champion had the league functioned this year.

BASEBALL SEASON

BECAUSE of the exigencies of war, the 1943 Duke baseball schedule was greatly revamped. Under the guidance of Athletic Director Eddie Cameron, a four-team league, consisting of Duke, Carolina, Carolina Naval Pre-Flight, and State was organized. At the end of the season Duke took second place in this newly organized four-team "Ration League."

Coach Jack Coombs started the season with a potent batting order: Carlyle Groome and George Yautz alternating at right field, Willie Kale at shortstop, Tom Davis in center field, Grady Scott in left field, Ed Little at first base, Bobby Rute catching, and Walt Curtin, Bob Hessler, Harry Palmer, Woody Carroll, and Ed Stephan sharing the pitching chores.

The Coombsmen started off the Ration League season with the N. C. State Red Terrors at Coombs Park. In one of the wildest opening-day games seen at Duke in recent years, the Blue Devils defeated the visitors, 15-10. Bob Hessler and Walt Curtin divided the pitching for the Coombsmen. Duke's attack was sparked by Tom Davis, who made three hits and Grady Stott and Willie Kale, who turned in a triple each.

Duke traveled to Chapel Hill in the second game to cross bats with Carolina Naval Pre-Flight. Behind the three-hit pitching of Joe Gonzales, the Cloudbusters shut out the Coombsmen, 4-0. Groome, Davis, and Freeze got the only Duke hits. Duke again traveled to Chapel Hill, this time to come across more air-tight pitching. Allon Carmichael held the Blue Devils to eight hits, as Carolina's Heels beat Duke, 5-2, in Duke's third game.

In Raleigh the Coombsmen got back on the winning side by trouncing the Red Terrors from N. C. State, 9-5, in a game where Bobby Rute and Carlyle Groome got three hits apiece to pace the Blue Devil batting attack. Bob Hessler gave up six hits to State. Duke returned to Coombs Park in glorious fashion by shutting out Carolina Pre-Flight, 7-0, behind the five-hit pitching of Harry Palmer. Rowland Sailer had a perfect day at the plate, as he got four hits in four four times at bat—two singles and two doubles.

A triple to center field by a pinch-hitter enabled two runs to score in the ninth inning to give the Tar Heels of North Carolina a meager 8-6 win over the Blue Devils in their sixth Ration League game. Curtin, Palmer, and Hessler shared the pitching chores, with Palmer being charged with the defeat. Davis and Stott led the Duke attack with three hits apiece. Leftie Heimberger, a freshman, pitched sensational ball to give the Coombsmen a 9-1 win over N. C. State in the Coombsmen's next game. Heimberger gave up eight hits in his first varsity start, and kept all these hits well scattered.

The Blue Devils unlimbered their big bats against Carolina Pre-Flight in their next game to defeat the Cloudbusters, 9-2, behind the excellent pitching of Walt Curtin. Curtin struck out seven batters, while Grady Stott clouted a homer and two singles in three trips to the plate. Duke came across some air-tight pitching by Carolina right-hander, Charlie Moore, with the Tar Heels beating the Coombsmen, 10-3, at Chapel Hill. The Blue Devils opened up their hitting attack at Coombs Park in their next League game by trouncing the Cloudbusters from Carolina Naval Pre-Flight, 10-1, behind the six-hit pitching of Walt Curtin. Extra base hits featured the contest with Ed Little and Willie Kale smacking out home runs for the Blue Devils, while Rowland Sailer knocked a triple for Duke.

Duke continued their heavy hitting in their next League game by slugging out a 16-4 victory over the Red Terrors from N. C. State at Raleigh. The game was a fairly tight affair until the seventh inning, with both pitchers holding the edge over the batters. In the seventh inning, however, Duke went ahead by a 7-4 margin, scoring four runs on as many hits and a couple of walks. In the ninth inning the Coombsmen scored nine runs. The Blue Devils took 14 turns at the plate and pounded out seven hits, matching them with four walks to get nine runs. Ed Little drove in six runs with four singles.

Carolina invaded Coombs Park to meet the Blue Devils in a Ration League game. Duke won, 9-3, with Curtin and Palmer dividing the pitching for the Coombsmen. Curtin was the winning pitcher. Stott and Little got three hits apiece to lead the Duke attack. Palmer, the pitcher, smacked a triple, something unusual for a pitcher.

In a non-League game the Blue Devils romped over the Davidson Wildcats at Coombs Park. Woody Carroll pitched four-hit ball. Duke got 12 hits, as George Yautz hit a homer into the left field hedge in the fourth inning. Yautz also contributed a nice running catch, that bordered on the shoestring type, in the fourth inning.

With former major league players sprinkled about its line-up, the Norfolk Naval Air Station baseball team took a 10-1 decision from the Coombsmen at Coombs Park in another non-Ration League game. "Pee Wee" Reese, former shortstop for the Brooklyn Dodgers, "Crash" Davis, ex-Duke and Philly Athletics second baseman, and Eddie Shokes, former Duke and Cincinnati Reds player, were among the boys in the lineup of the Sailors. Al Evans, former Washington catcher, did the receiving.

Under the expert coaching of Jack Coombs, the Blue Devils won eight games while losing four in the new war time "Ration League."

The 1944 Ration League Team made its bow on April 10 with N. C. State.

MANAGERS

DELTA PHI RHO ALPHA

WHEN DELTA PHI RHO ALPHA, local honorary athletic sorority, was founded in 1921 by a group of girls, its members wished to give recognition to those who had excelled in leadership in sports. This sorority was created as a sister organization to Tombs, honorary athletic fraternity, as an answer to demands for better organization of athletic activities and for the purpose of creating a greater and more active participation in intramural athletics. This purpose was carried out under the able direction of the organization's president, Connie Campbell.

Admission to new girls is limited to two juniors and seven sophomores. The initiation is similar to that of Tombs. The initiates are stationed anywhere on the East Campus from the Washington Duke Statue to the steps of Southgate.

Each future member is garbed in the traditional "goat costume" of heavy black stockings, one black and one white shoe, a middy blouse, and a short black skirt, and is made to carry a rolling pin, a paddle, a bucket, and various other articles with the Greek letters of the fraternity on it.

To accomplish its aim of wider intramural activity Delta Phi Rho Alpha sponsored an intramural basketball tournament in the winter and a tennis tournament in the spring. To encourage athletic participation and perfection of one's abilities, a key is awarded each year to the senior who by her leadership, sportsmanship, and athletic ability throughout her four years at Duke is considered the most outstanding athlete.

Having been chosen for membership because of outstanding ability and interest in athletics, the members of Delta Phi Rho Alpha are conscientious workers and planners. This year the organization coöperated in the holding of open houses in the gym.

In this time of war the importance of physical fitness for women as well as for the members of our armed services is being increasingly stressed. The college women of the day have often failed to qualify for the strict physical standards set by the women's branches of the armed services and for rigorous positions in industry. Delta Phi Rho Alpha by its emphasis upon athletic activities and encouragement of physical training has helped the college women of Duke to meet the strict physical standards required by the women's branches of the armed services.

This organization has more and more become an important and active organization on the campus and will continue to do so in the furtherance of its work, one purpose of which is to build strong, healthy, and firm bodies for the American girl of today, a characteristic which is so much stressed today in a warring world.

NEREIDIAN CLUB

THE NEREIDIAN Club has functioned for many years as the honorary organization for coed swimming. This club, which chooses its members through competition in swimming and diving, has tended to stimulate interest and increase proficiency among the students of the Woman's College.

Each spring, Nereidian comes into special prominence for its pageant, well known by both East and West campuses. Since a great deal of time is spent in planning and practicing the theme, we may safely conclude that the results are commendable for all concerned. This year, the theme was somewhat more progressive than past years; since it had in the background, music based on current popular tunes. The annual pageant is the highlight of the year's activities. Every member participates and it is always greeted with much enthusiasm throughout the college.

Besides the pageant, each year, Nereidian sponsors the participation of Duke in the National Telegraphic Swimming Meet through the Women's Athletic Association. This competition displays the talent which its members have in speed alone, determined by comparative times.

Every fall Nereidian holds competitive tryouts for new members. Any undergraduate girl is urged to participate in the tryouts, and several students from each class are invited to join the club. These girls are subsequently initiated, and participate in the activities of the club for the year.

In order to stimulate interest of underclass girls in Nereidian, a Junior Nereidian Club was formed under the guidance of active Nereidians. Improvement in general swimming is the aim of this group so that they too may become eligible for membership. This group sponsors the fall and spring inter-dormitory swimming meets and also the weekly mixed swims.

Besides being active within itself, Nereidian takes interest in the social life of the school. In addition to sponsoring open houses, it has frequent afternoon swims followed by dinner and meetings in the club room.

The high point of the year was the pageant, which displayed as its motif "The Top Hat" Club. Some of the figures were the Rhythm of the Drums, the Fox Trot Tandem, South American Rhythms, Top Hat, and Waltz Time.

Nereidian might well be proud of its achievements, for its girls are known over campus not only as athletically proficient, but also well-rounded socially. Its general popularity on campus is a direct result of this characteristic.

WOMEN'S ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION

THE PURPOSE of the Woman's Athletic Association is to offer a well-rounded program of recreational sports on East Campus. A system of sports clubs, such as the Tennis Club, the Modern Dance Club, and the Swimming Club, gives an opportunity for all coeds to participate with others of the same interests in their favorite sport or sports.

Activities of the Association are coördinated by a governing board of nineteen members. Board members for the year 1943-44 were the following: Mary Coggin, president; Betty Wilson, vice president; Ione Blackburn, secretary; Dorothy Lewis, treasurer; Ruth Barnwell, president of Nereidian Club; Edith Whitson, president of Modern Dance Club; Gwen Pettit, president of Pegasus; Mike O'Malley, president of the Outing Club; Connie Campbell, head of basketball; Nancy Hunter, head of swimming; Tommye Stanton, head of tennis; Betty Lee Boren, head of golf; Dorothy Hyland, head of hockey; Jackie Lewis, head of fencing; Frances Huemer, head of softball; Jane Ammerman, head of minor sports; Helen Michelson, head of badminton; Lloyd Bailey, publicity director; and Betsy Buchanan, freshman class representative. The faculty sponsor was Miss Modena Lewis.

A project of the W.A.A. that is popular with both East and West Campus is the sponsorship of frequent open houses in the gym. On Open House nights the gym is the scene of lively activity, with informality and fun being the keynotes. Highlights of such an evening are dancing, swimming, volley ball, and ping-pong. Since these open houses have proved so popular this year, they will probably be held more frequently next year. Much of the credit for the success of the open houses goes to vice president Betty Wilson.

Well-known to campus and town alike is the annual Modern Dance Club Recital, usually given in the spring. Dance numbers are Club "originals"; therefore members gain practice not only in actual performance, but also in choreography. Membership in the Club is based on try-outs held in the fall and spring.

Tournaments held in various sports during the year offer tests of skill as well as furnish recreation for as many coeds as participate. There are two basketball tournaments annually; in one there is inter-sorority competition, while in the other, teams from each of the dormitories, one from the Town Girl's Club, one from the Nurses' Home, and one from Delta Phi Rho Alpha play against each other. This year the sorority tournament was won by the Kappa Delta team, while Delta Phi Rho Alpha took first place in the other tournament. Tennis enthusiasts have an opportunity to play in two tournaments yearly— one in the fall and one in the spring. Jean Rockey, freshman from New Jersey, took top honors in the fall competition. Tournaments are held in badminton and golf also. The bowling tournament, sponsored by the Minor Sports Club, features play among teams made up of the best bowlers from each house. Inter-dorm swimming meets are held by the Swimming Club. The first meet of the year was won by Alspaugh, the second by Pegram. Haines Field is the site of softball competition among house teams. The bradn of playing may be a little short of big-league standards, but as for fun, that's another story!

Membership in Nereidian, the honorary swimming club, is a goal to be worked toward for those interested in swimming. Every spring the club presents the traditional pageant, which is well-attended by students and faculty.

Afternoons in fall and spring often find members of the Outing Club cooking supper at one of the picnic sites in the Duke Forest. In the case where ambition is super-abundant, a breakfast hike may be the program of the day.

The horses that members of Pegasus ride may not be winged, but still there is fun aplenty in breakfast rides, supper rides, and riding exhibitions.

The Fencing Club has been organized for those who wish to improve their skill in the "art of the foils."

This year has seen two athletic meets between coeds of Duke and Carolina. The first took place in the fall under the sponsorship of the Hockey Club when a team from Carolina played Duke on Haines Field. Neither team could boast of a victory, the score being a 3-3 tie. The second occasion was an exhibition basketball game at Carolina.

The W.A.A. is indebted to the Physical Education Staff members for their help and cooperation in carrying out the various activities of the organization.

The history of the W.A.A. has been characterized by a steady increase in membership and popularity. The direction of this trend shows the certainty of an even better program next year. This program will include enjoyable and healthful recreation for all the East Campus coeds.

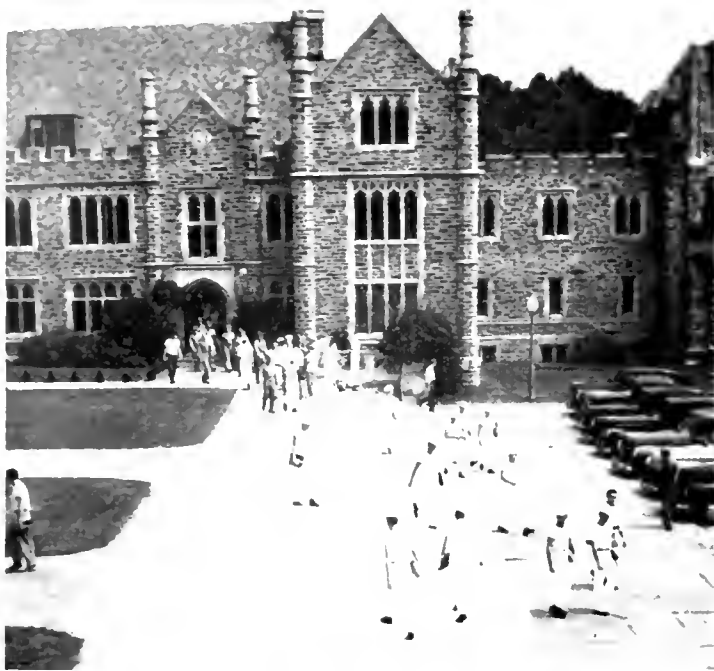

DUKE UNIVERSITY

On these two pages are shown two air views of the campuses of Duke University. Some students have seen them before; but through the request of many, the staff presents them again, for they are a means for recalling

Happy days spent at Duke University. On the left, is a view of the West
Men's Campus, home of Trinity College, the Graduate Schools, and the Hospital. At the right is a view of the East or Women's Campus, which is the home of the Women's College. These two campuses are separated by a mile and a half of campus roadway, giving Duke both the advantages of having a coed university, and men's or women's college.

Navy "whites" are much in evidence between classes in summer school.

Here you are, Kappas. Really didn't forget.

Helen Brooks raises flag as school opens.

Right: Scholastically-gowned faculty waits in line before Duke's first navy program graduation. Left: Governor Broughton gives pertinent words of advice to out-going sailors, marines, and civilians, in the last speech they will hear while Duke undergraduates.

Bandage rolling. An hour weekly bandage rolling is a "must" on a COG'S list of her many war-time activities.

Wait stamps. Five o'clock sharp come Tuesday and the Union chant becomes "No dinner 'til you buy a wait stamp."

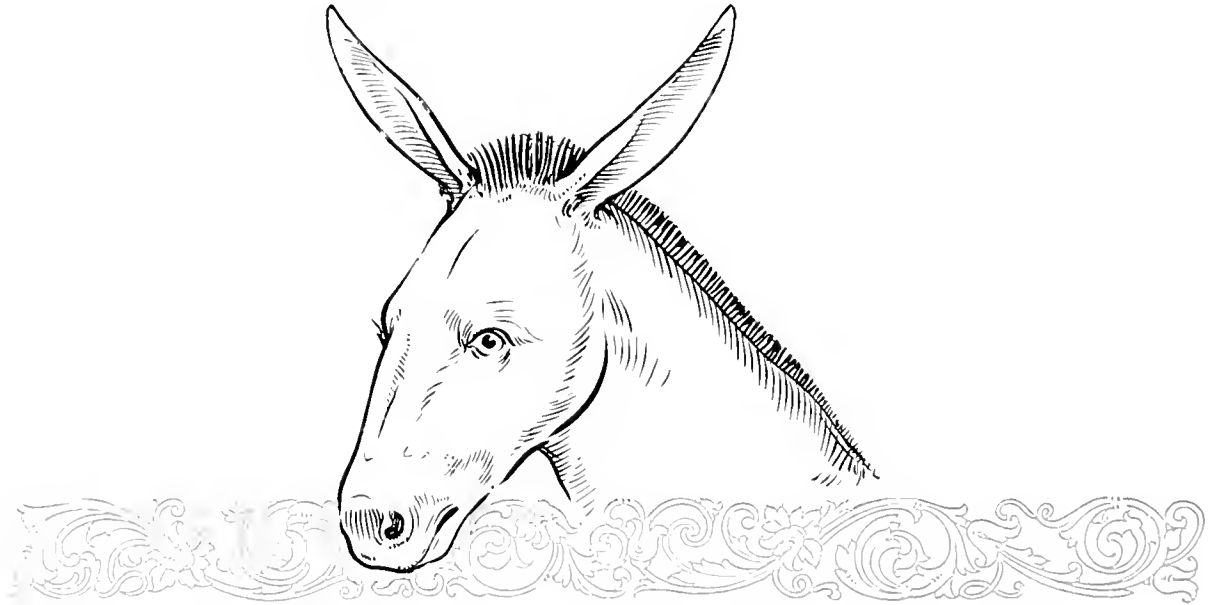

This is no bread line! It's Duke's Navy men waiting for their pay checks.

Pay-day on west: V-12's wearily wait for money for week-end in long line at gym.

ALPHA SIGMA SIGMA

AT THE BEGINNING of the year, the GRAN-TICLER staff decided to do away with the usual camouflage given to the members of Alpha Sigma Sigma; a camouflage affected by the inclusion of campus Bigwigs on the list. But because of the unfavorable notoriety which would be given these students, the original plan was discarded in favor of the usual tradition. However, we still retain these students who, throughout this and other years, have ostentized so many qualities and actions of a censorable nature that they are unquestionably eligible for mention in an abridged roll. These individuals have attained an end toward which they have devoted all of their energies, and they should furnish horrible examples of Alpha Sigma Sigma qualities which other undergraduates should shun. The GRAN-TICLER staff regrets that these ODD students cannot be openly recognized.

Comfortable seven miles up!

High in the sky, temperatures may drop to 50 below zero. But our bomber crews are dressed to fight with efficiency. In some cases, they wear electrically heated uniforms.

THE Army makes sure that every garment is styled for comfort and long wear. Down to the underwear — where styles and fabrics match the climate.

• You can have the satisfaction of correctly styled, comfortable underwear, too. For, during the past 40 years, the makers of HANES Underwear have learned how to knit and tailor underwear to meet the varied needs of climate, season and personal preference.

HANES garments are cut or knit to full size — no skimping. HANES Union Suits have full body room and correct sleeve and leg length. HANES Athletic Shirts fit trimly and are long enough to stay in place under or over your Shorts. HANES Shorts are roomy in the seat and have legs the right length. Drexel

Knights of the Round Table

Their names are Tom and Bill and Joe instead of Lancelot and Gawain. Their deeds are greater than those of any ancient story. And the Round Table? The tables they left behind in their own familiar living or dining rooms are not magical or famous. But wait—perhaps those tables do have magic—the magic of home, and dear faces gathered 'round. The Drexel Furniture Company made some of these tables—circular, oval, oblong, but always beautiful. Good tables to come back to. Or—if you don't own one yet—good to look forward to, like all Drexel furniture. * American men deserve to return to gracious homes. You who are waiting can help to bring this to pass.
